Rail Unions Appeal AIB Rollbacks

B.C. Rail unions will appeal "deplorable" rollbacks ordered by the Anti-Inflation Board in judgments released Tuesday, union joint council chairman Jack Whittaker said today.

And although it is not yet known whether the AIB ruling calls for re-payment of retroactive cash, Whittaker said the 1,400 union members affected have been instructed to hold tight.

No re-payment will take place, he said, until the appeal against the rollback is completed and the situation is clarified.

Whittaker said if the provincial government used its influence on the AIB, the process could be speeded up.

"The AIB had this decision ready in three weeks, whereas it takes others seven or eight months . . . maybe the provincial government could use its influence again," said Whittaker.

"The due process of law is proceeding; the appeal may be granted and until that decision comes down, why should we pay? It's the railway's problem," he said.

Meanwhile BCR vice-president Mac Norris said he will be meting with union representatives and arbitrator Owen B. Shime "as soon as possible" to discuss ramifications of the AIB rollback.

Heaviest decrease was the AIB recommendation that the 34.26 per cent increase for instrument levelmen, rodmen and chainmen, be rolled back to 9.7 per cent.

The group is represented by the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 115, and the rollback, says Whittaker, is "something we didn't expect at all."

"We thought the AIB would have looked at the justification for the increases. It sounds hell-high, but it's not, the wage rates for those employees were so damn low they started at $3.72 an hour."

B.C. Rail officials said today at is not known whether the AIB ruling brought down in Ottawa specifies that wages paid under the contracts must be paid back to the company.

In the three arbitrated agreements, however, there is provision that the arbitrator will retain jursidiction in implementing AIB rollbacks. His recommendations, both management and the unions agreed, would be binding.

If payback provisions are not specified, presumably Shime would decide what process would be used.

"But you can't pass all the bucks to the arbitrator," said Whittaker. "He's no magi-

Red Roses Blooming Disgrace

LONDON (TNS) — Are Red roses exempt from England's watering ban?

There's a diplomatic hassle brewing over the question.

Seems that the roses in the Russian embassy in London are blooming lovely compared to the flowers in the gardens adjacent to the embassy property.

Property owners, peeved because the embassy roses are in full flower while their own roses and lawns are brown and withered due to lack of water, protested to the British foreign office and the London water board.

Because of recent drought conditions in Britain, all watering of gardens has been banned.

So far, Soviet spokesman are claiming the embassy property is Russian territory and exempt from any local laws or bylaws.

Anacortes Ferry To Stop?

Engineers of Washington State ferries will strike Aug. 31, closing down the Sidney to Anacortes run unless a contract is signed before that time, the chief spokesman for the engineers said today.

The ferry makes two trips a day in the summer season and has been carrying full loads of 160 cars and several hundred passengers between Washington State and Vancouver Island since B.C. Ferries' rates were raised.

Roy Vincent, branch agent of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, said the ferry service would be halted by a walkout unless a contract is signed before September.

The engineers' association can not call a strike but the majority of the 103 men involved have said they will not work after Aug. 31 without a contract.

Vincent said the walkout is not authorized by the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, which is required to provide employees to the state-owned company, even if the contract has expired.

"However, it would be a hopeless task for me to try to obtain enough engineers to run the ferry system if the men walk out."

Vincent said the association is studying ways to get supplies to the San Juan Islands that would normally be supplied by Washington State ferries.

The association would see that the island communities received the minimum services necessary to survive. However, this policy would not extend to Vancouver Island, which has alternative methods of obtaining supplies from the mainland.

The engineers are seeking a pay raise of 15 per cent.

If the engineers walk out, it would be the second strike against the company in two years, despite the fact there is some question as to whether the walkouts are legal.

In 1974 the unlicensed seamen walked out and gained a two-year contract which has another nine months to run.

China Still Shaking But B.C. Tours Safe

Within 24 hours there have been reassuring reports on two parties of British Columbia tourists in China as slight earth tremors continue to be felt in earthquake-torn Peking.

The first message came in a cable received Tuesday by the Thomas Cook Travel office in Victoria.

The firm's spokesman John Caldwell said a 25-member Victoria party headed by Dr. Edward Owen of the University of Victoria reported all members of the party were safe.

But their trip to the capital has now been cancelled and they are being re-routed to Shanghai, Caldwell said. The group will be in China until Aug. 10.

The second piece of good news was received today by Richard Phillips, 988 Claremont, whose wife Molly is leading another party of 24 British Columbians.

Phillips said it was the first information he had received from his wife or any official source since he learned a week ago that tour members were well but sheltering in the Canadian embassy for safety.

While he had been reassuring himself that no news was good news, Phillips admitted until the letter arrived today, he had been "a bit anxious"

In the letter, dated July 29, his wife told him the party was waiting for a plane to be transferred to the northern city of Dairen. Meanwhile, all members were well and had suffered no loss of personal property.

"It appears they were going to continue with a possibly shortened visit," Phillips said, although the letter gave no further details of their travel plans.

Mrs. Phillips wrote that at the epicentre of the earthquake some 100 miles away in the coal mining region "things were very bad" and a party of French visitors had "suffered very badly."

It's not the first time he has had to wait anxiously for news of his wife, who was born in China and worked there as a teacher.

"I had a similar experience a few years ago," he recalled. "My wife took a tour to Hong Kong and down to the Philippines and Thailand. On the way back there were in the midst of a typhoon and I had no information of her whereabouts for several days."

News reports out of Peking said slight earth tremors were felt today, a few hours after the Chinese authorities had recommended that the Chinese population and the foreign community should "maintain vigilance" during the earthquake alert.

The situation in the capital remained calm and the six million-odd people living in the streets continued to consolidate their shelters and refuges in an orderly and disciplined manner.

The foreign community is still living in military tents provided by the authorities or in the entrance halls of embassies.

Fresh Riots Break Out In S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Police opened fire on some 20,000 black demonstrators in Soweto township today and witnesses said at least three persons were killed and 18 others injured.

But police denied anyone was killed in the clash and said about 12 people were injured. They claimed the segregated black township was calm and under control.

The witnesses included a black journalist who said he was carrying one of the victims to a hospital when he died.

It was the first major outbreak of violence in Soweto since a student demostration on June 16 touched off an upheaval in black townships around Johannesburg and Pretoria in which at least 176 persons were killed and more than 1,100 injured. All but two of the dead and most of the injured were black.

Witnesses reported the township, home to more than one million blacks, was in chaos today as roving mobs set fire to shops and cars. A key railway signal block was burned. Commuter trains were halted.

Heavily armed police were reported touring the township, eight miles south of Johannesburg, in armoured personnel carriers and dispersing crowds with tear gas. Police sealed off all exits with roadblocks.

Trouble was also reported in the black township of Alexandra, adjoining white residential areas in northern Johannesburg. Police said there were two attempts there to set schools on fire.

The outbreak in Soweto apparently was touched off by the recent detention of several student leaders, including Hlaku Rachidi, president of the Black People's Convention, and Ben Palmer Louw, a former leader of the black South African Students Organization. A number of other students have been under detention since the June riots.

Factories and other businesses in Johannesburg reported thousands of blacks absent from work.

Rioting was reported spreading through the township. Hundreds of riot police in camouflage battle fatigues and police in civilian clothes armed with submachine guns and rifles sealed off the area.

The police barred all other whites from Soweto, telling them it was not safe for them.

ESCAPER HELD IN BANK HEIST

William Head escapee David Gary Bennett, 28, was today charged with armed robbery in a $15,000 holdup Tuesday at a Burnaby branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Charged jointly is Stephen Albert Hall, of New Westminster, who is in Royal Columbian Hospital after being shot by RCMP during the robbery.

Both men were arrested when police arrived at the scene as the two men attempted to find the keys to their getaway car.

Bennett, serving a 10-year term for robbery and possession of narcotics, escaped May 21 from a party of William Head inmates who had been given leave to attend a bowling party at Mayfair Lanes.

He was to have been released in Dec., 1978.

Tree Topples Killing Girls

Special to the Times

BUTTLE LAKE — The death of two young girls whose tent was crushed by a falling tree Monday night may alter B.C. provincial campsite policy, a parks official said today.

Laurie Jean Primrose, 10, and Tracy Lee Deakins, 9, both of Campbell River, are believed to have died instantly when a 175-foot Douglas fir uprooted for no apparent reason and crashed onto their Ralph River campsite at Strathcona Park.

District parks superintendent Gordon Rathbone of Miracle Beach said it was a freak accident, to his knowledge the first fatality due to a falling tree in a B.C. provincial campsite.

The campsite is on a delta where the Ralph River empties into the south end of Buttle Lake about 43 miles from Campbell River, with about 100 individual sites scattered among a stand of mature trees.

Rathbone described it as a climax forest similar to the trees in Cathedral Grove on the Alberni highway.

"There is always an inherent danger in these situations," Rathbone said, despite the efforts of the parks branch.

Asked whether it was possible the campsite would be relocated, away from overmature trees, Rathbone said:

"Campsite policy will have to come under review."

Parksmen removed about 50 large trees and 20 smaller ones in a routine snag program last November. Rathbone said any suspect trees are cut down each fall.

But the tree which fell Monday appeared to be healthy until it exposed its root system and disclosed a rotted tap root which Rathbone said would have been "very difficult to discern."

The tree stood in sandy, gravelly soil, he said.

It had been breezy along the lakeshore Monday afternoon, but the air was still when the tree toppled around 10 p.m. while the girls slept. The trunk fell directly across their tent.

"They wouldn't know what hit them," Campbell River RCMP said.

The parents of one girl, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Primrose, were in a trailer parked about 75 yards away from the tent.

Thomson Dies

LONDON (UPI) — Lord Thomson, the Canadian-born newspaper magnate, died in a hospital today at age 82.

Thomson, chairman of the Thomson Organization which owns The Times and The Sunday Times, and close to 50 Canadian daily newspapers was admitted to the hospital a month ago for treatment of a chest infection following a cold and a subsequent stroke.

His body is being flown to Canada for burial in Toronto.

According to former Canadian prime minister John Diefenbaker Thomson was "the greatest Canadian of his time."

Roy Thomson, the son of a barber, built up a newspaper empire in Canada, the United States, Africa and Asia estimated worth $180 million.

"It was my habit to offer to buy any newspaper which came into any discussion," he once wrote.

Besides the 148 newspapers and 138 magazines owned by his organization he had a vast interest in radio, televison and publishing companies.

He put up most of the money to enter commercial television in Scotland in the 1950's, then an unknown field in Britain.

"It was a licence to print money," he said later.

Auditor-General Search Underway

British Columbia Tuesday took the first step in the cross-country search for an auditor-general who will act as a watchdog of the province's financial accounts.

The 13-member all-party legislative commiteee which will choose the auditor-general met for the first time to map out a national advertising campaign outlining the qualifications necessary for the $52,000-a-year job.

The committee, comprised of eight Socred MLAs, three NDP members and the Liberal and Conservative leaders, elected Jim Hewitt (SC — Boundary Similkameen) as its chairman.

The Public Service Commission was authorized by the committee to draw up an ad to be placed in newspapers across the country, but the ad will be circulated among committee members for their comments before it is published.

The competition for the auditor-general closes Nov. 1.

IRANIAN ATHLETES GO BACK TO JEERS

TEHERAN (Reuter) — Iran's Olympic team arrived home to face a public and press outcry over their "miserable" performance at the Games in Montreal.

Only the football team, which lost to the Soviet Union in the quarter-finals, was welcomed with flowers.

From 96 competitors in the nine events, Iran gleaned only a silver medal by welterweight wrestler Mansour Barzegar and a bronze by flyweight weightlifter Mohammed Nassiri.

There had been high hopes for high jumper Teymour Ghiassi, the Asian Games gold medallist with a jump of seven feet three inches. At Montreal, he failed to clear seven feet.

Ghiassi blamed the rain during the event.

Fifth Romanian Athlete Joins Defectors

MONTREAL (UPI) — The immigration department said today a sixth Olympic athlete, another Romanian, has defected and requested permanent residence in Canada.

The latest defector joins four other Romanian athletes and 17-year-old Soviet diver Sergei Nemtsanov who elected not to return home with their national teams following the Olympic summer games which ended Sunday.

An immigration spokesman said the department had also received a request for permanent residence from an Ethiopian national, but he was not an athlete at the games. Ethiopa fielded a 40-member team for the games but dropped out before their start along with other African countries protesting New Zealand's sporting ties with South Africa.

The identity of the fifth Romanian defector was being withheld, the immigration spokesman said, at his request. Of the remaining four Romanian defectors, only oarsman Walter Lambertus and canoeist Ivan Haralambic, have been previously identified.

The most recent defection was announced as controversy continued around Nemtsanov's refusal to return to the U.S.S.R.

External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen Tuesday revealed Canada has received two stiff diplomatic notes from the Soviets demanding the return of the 17-year-old diver. He called the Soviet position "quite unacceptable."

But Soviet spokesmen maintained the pressure. The leader of the Soviet Union's track and field team, Nikolai Riashentsev, said at College Park, Maryland, Tuesday Nemtsanov's defection represented "the kidnapping of an underage boy sent to Montreal under the province of his coaches.

"This was a well-thought-out, well-placed provocative action," he said.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau also rejected Soviet charges Nemtsanov was kidnapped and brainwashed, saying the athlete made the decision "of his own free will."

Newspaper Magnate Dies

worked as his closest aide. He is also survived by one daughter from his wife Edna, who died in 1951. One other daughter died some years ago.

Thomson described his takeover of the Times in 1966 as "the greatest moment of my life."

The newspaper, however, continued to lose money although Thomson pledged to keep The Times alive.

"It's unthinkable that it should just die," he said. "The Times is Britain to many people."

A nonsmoker and a moderate drinker, Thomson said "some people talk as if there was something wrong with making money. But isn't money the measure of your success?"

Thomson believed in conservatism, capital punishment, the European Common Market and a rearmed Germany.

He described his publishing empire as a "licence to serve humanity."

He became a British citizen in 1963 and was created a baron the following year. He took the title of Lord Thomson of Fleet of Northbridge in the city of Edinburgh — a convenient link with Scotland and with Fleet Street, the London home of Britain's newspaper industry.

The motto on his coat of arms read "Never a Backward Step" — a creed Thomson followed all his life.

"If I had any advice to pass on as a successful man it is this," he wrote: "If one wants to be successful, one must think. One must think until it hurts."

He left school at 15 because of family debts and went to work as a $5 a week clerk.

In 1931, Thomson was a struggling salesman of radio sets in northern Ontario and looked like just another guy who hadn't quite made it.

Then 37, he came up with the idea that was to transform his life and send him to the top of one of the world's greatest publishing empires.

Thomson figured what he needed to help sell his radios was a radio station his customers could listen to on their new-fangled toys.

With a bit of luck, hard work and almost no money, Thomson turned this idea into a chain of radio stations and branched into newspapers.

cian. They've set the limit and he can only divide it up."

The board recommended a reduction in four other compensation agreements, three of them arbitration awards.

The two year agreements run from Aug. 1, 1975 to July 31, 1977.

They are:

—That the arbitration award of 27.82 per cent in the first year for track and bridge forces and equipment operators be rolled back to 10.68 per cent. In the second year of the agreement with the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees, the recommended 10.49 increase would be reduced to 8.03, under the board ruling.

—The AIB requested the arbitration award of 24.43 per cent and 9.66 per cent for truck drivers, warehousemen, clerical support staff, be modified to 9.87 per cent and the second year as negotiated, but not to exceed the arithmetic guidelines of 9.8 per cent. The 282 employees are represented by the General Truck Drivers and Helpers Union, local 31.

The second year of the agreement with the IUOE, 13.73 per cent under the arbitration award, would be rolled back to 10 per cent.

For train dispatchers, crew dispatchers, operators, the proposed agreement was for increases of 11.86 and 15.15 per cent. AIB recommended this be reduced to 10.55 per cent and 8.3 per cent.

The group is represented by the Transportation Communication division of the Brotherhood of Railway, Airline and Steamship Clerks.

—Locomotive engineers, represented by the Canadian Union of Transportation Employees, would have increases of 16.09 per cent and 10.79 per cent, reduced to 10.68 per cent and 8.03 per cent.

'LEGION DISEASE' STILL MYSTERY

Times News Services

HARRISBURG, Pa. — Researchers say they don't know when they will be able to identify the mystery "legionnaire's disease" that has claimed 21 lives in Pennsylvania and sent more than 140 people to the hospital in three states.

There were no signs the outbreak was abating, and officials planned a statewide check of Pennsylvania hospitals today for a more accurate picture of the situation.

"The disease has not levelled off," state Health Secretary Leonard Bachman said Tuesday. "Apparently both the number of deaths and the number of new cases have increased and are increasing."

Meanwhile, the U.S. has prepared about 100 million doses of swine flu vaccine and plans have been made to immunize residents of Pennsylvania and other areas when Congress clears up insurance problems, Health, Education and Welfare secretary David Mathews said today.

Amid warnings that the mystery illness may turn out to be swine flu, a Congressional committee Tuesday took the first step to break the logjam.

"If we can get past this present impasse — if Congress will support us — then I think we'll be in good shape," Mathews said.

"I think the best advice I can give is to await results of the (Pennsylvania) tests."

Investigators are not ruling out any possibility in the search for the trail the killer disease took in attacking the American Legion members, or their wives or friends, after they returned from their Philadelphia convention.

"Quite truthfully, I am absolutley stumped," said Dr. William E. Parkin, the Pennsylvania health department's chief epidemiologist. "I can't even make an educated guess. We've come up with things that just don't seem to fit."

Epidemiologists are trained to pinpoint the occurrence of disease and the way it is transmitted. The job is complicated in this case because the specialists are dealing with a killer they cannot identify.

Parkin's job is like assembling a puzzle.

But the key parts are missing, according to Parkin, or are well hidden by a series of seemingly innocent events that took place at the legion convention in Philadelphia July 21-24.

Amin's Son Snubbed, Five Students Shot

NAIROBI, Kenya (UPI) — Ugandan troops shot and killed five university students after President Idi Amin's son complained to his father he was being snubbed by classmates and had been threatened, the Kenyan newspaper The Nation said.

The Nation said dozens of students had been wounded and several hundred others had been arrested during a major clash between army troops and students at Kampala's Makerere University on Tuesday.

The Nation could not be confirmed by independent sources.

However, several residents in the area of the university, contacted by UPI by telephone, said there had been shooting in the vicinity of the campus Tuesday. Other students said only there had been "some trouble" at the campus but would not elaborate.

The Nation report said Amin's teen-aged son telephoned his father to complain that other university students were giving him the silent treatment, refusing to talk to him, and that his life had been threatened.

Amin rushed troops to the campus to rescue the boy and his two bodyguards and when panicked students fled, opened fire, killing five of them and wounding many others, the report said.

VANCOUVER (AP) — Commercial fishing for sockeye salmon has been closed in the Strait of Georgia and the mouth of the Fraser River because fishermen have made big inroads in other runs, although fishing resumed Tuesday for 24 hours while the International Pacific Salmon Fisheries Commission was to meet to consider further closures.

HANDICAPPED GAMES NOW IN AN UPROAR

TORONTO (UPI) — The Olympics for the handicapped opened Tuesday wracked by the same type of political and economic problems faced earlier by the Olympic Games at Montreal.

The 1976 Olympiad for the Physically Disabled opened desperately short of cash following cancellation of a $500,000 federal grant in protest over South African participation in the games for blind, amputee and wheelchair athletes.

And a spokesman said Jamaica had already left and a number of other countries were threatening Tuesday night to boycott the games if South Africa did not withdraw.

The spokesman would not say which black countries were considering backing out because it was still hoped they would remain.

Martian Life Remains Mystery

PASADENA, Calif. (UPI) — Viking scientists said today they have three working biological experiments on Mars but a fourth test that would seek past life forms by analyzing molecules was unable to get a soil sample to test because the boom arm that lifts the soil malfunctioned.

The experiments seeking current biology were "brewing their witches brew" on Mars, but none of them have indicated signs of life. Operation of the third test was confirmed Tuesday.

The instrument that was unable to get a tiny bit of Martian soil to test, the gas chromatograph mass spectrometer, would seek past forms of Martian biology, or the ingredients that might tell scientists if life is possible in the future.

Scientists said it is needed to provide insight into whatever life forms might be found.

Viking scientists met during the night to analyze the problem and decide when to try a third time.

"The lander's soil sampler boom did not complete the delivery sequence that would supply the molecular analysis instrument with a sample," Viking officials said.

The boom arm extended its collector head, a scoop like a toy steam shovel, about 95 inches, dug a trench in the Martian surface, took a sample and retracted.

"Something occurred that caused the sequence to be automatically stopped," the officials said.

Two biology investigations which gave surprising results earlier, still do not indicate signs of life on Mars, Dr. Harold Klein, head of the biology team said.

Data indicating the third experiment, called a pyrolytic release, was working told scientists only that the test was going on with soil in the chamber.

Klein said the puzzling results from two other tests transmitted back earlier were not life signs, but the scientists were not ruling out biology as a source.

"We can not, and do not, claim any biological significance derived with the experiment and we do not see any biological activity thus far," he said.

tion of biology with the gas engine experiment."

That investigation showed a sudden surge of oxygen that puzzled project scientists earlier.

"There was never any question of biology with the gas engine experiment."

That investigation showed a sudden surge of oxygen that puzzled project scientists earlier.

"We have three healthy experiments brewing their witches brew," Klein said. "The fact that we are not seeing any biological activity here is not unexpected," he said. "Even with terrestrial soils, with known biological activity, we seldom see changes this early."

WORST EVER ICE HASSLES ARCTIC STUDY

The worst Arctic Pack ice conditions in more than 50 years have put an abrupt end to the Pat Bay Ocean Sciences Institute's summer studies in the Beaufort Sea, and hampered the progress of a six-ship drilling fleet.

A Victoria coast guard official reported Tuesday that the institute's 1,600-ton vessel Parizeau was severely damaged last Friday in a solid wall of pack ice held fast to the Point Barrow, Alaska, shoreline by onshore winds.

Apart from damage to the ships rudder, two blades were sheared from her port propeller and one blade from the starboard.

The Parizeau with a crew of about 45 including research personnel was under escort by the Canadian Coast Guard icebreaker Bernier and reported making "very slow time" through the ice wall about 12 miles east of Point Barrow.

They were trying to reach open water and put in at ice-free Peard Bay, south of Point Barrow.

A spokesman for the institute said arrangements were being made to have the ship towed back to its base here — for repairs at either Yarrows Ltd., Esquimalt, or Vancouver's Burrard drydock — once it is in clear water.

Meanwhile, six ships of the Canadian Marine Drilling Ltd. fleet which had expected to be in the Beaufort Sea around mid-July were heading at snail's pace for a rendezvous with a U.S. Coast Guard icebreaker and the fleet's three icebreaker-supply boats.

It's a slow race against time for the Canmar fleet, which is under contract to drill wells for Dome Petroleum Company of Calgary and other companies holding permits in the Beaufort Sea.

The drilling permits issued by the federal government require operations to stop Sept. 15, although at that time the drilling may be extended for 10 days if the weather is favorable.

Soviet Carrier Sailing North

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Kiev, Russia's first aircraft carrier, has left the Mediterranean Sea and apparently is on its way to join the Soviet northern fleet in the Barents Sea.

A Pentagon spokesman said Tuesday the carrier, first of its type in the Soviet navy, left the Mediterranean last Saturday and was currently located off the Irish coast.

The ship was built at a Black Sea shipyard and carries YAK36 vertical takeoff and landing planes—the first Russian sea deployment of naval aircraft.

Hydro's Forecast

The new chairman of B.C. Hydro, Robert Bonner, said in a recent interview refuting criticism by the B.C. Energy Commission and other groups of the utility's forecasts of future power needs that the public doesn't understand Hydro.

Hydro has predicted that sales of electricity will grow 9.2 per cent annually for the next decade, whereas the energy commission (a separate and independent government-funded body), says electrical demand will grow only 5.4 per cent a year on average to 1991, 6.5 per cent 1976-81.

The number of British Columbians who understand the arithmetic and comprehend all of the factors that went into the rival estimates probably could be assembled with ease in a small auditorium, but an attempt should be made at least to question some of Hydro's assumptions about power, if only for strictly monetary reasons.

Bonner says Hydro will have to borrow $550 to $600 million annually for the next decade to finance expansion projects and new facilities in order to fulfill its estimate of annual growth. Add that total to Hydro's existing indebtedness and B.C. is looking maybe at $1 billion a year just to service that debt. The money comes from Hydro's income, i.e. you and me.

Another legitimate question: how much is Hydro's forecast a self-fulfilling prediction?

Electricity growth is not an uncontrollable thing with a life of its own; common sense dictates that there are ways and means of controlling it. For example, Hydro some time ago stopped advertising the advantages of natural gas in heating and cooking. What effect has this had on gas consumption?

The Hydro chairman dismisses as an aberration last year's .4 per cent decline in power sales — the first-ever drop for Hydro — due to the province's sagging economy. But 1976 doesn't look that much rosier.

According to Bonner, Hydro will have to review its rates annually from now on — a euphemism for "increase." But he admits that nobody knows the effect of higher rates on consumption. Comparison with B.C. Ferries, say, would suggest that somewhere higher rates intersect with an unwillingness to pay. To be reasonable, few people have electricity disconnected. But many more will turn down the thermostat or refuse to buy appliances that looked attractive in the days of cheap power.

These are all inexact speculations, and only a utility like Hydro or research agency like the B.C. Energy Commission has the resources necessary to determine even very inexactly how much electricity B.C. is going to need in the next decade.

But the man in the street can and should be skeptical of the generalizations which underly the forecasts and computer projections, judging from past experience with the Columbia River projects, where cost estimates went wildly up and up, and expenses were "reassigned" to make the final bill appear lower than it actually was.

If British Columbians adopt a doubting attitude towards Hydro's estimate of future power needs, it's because there is a tremendous amount of money at stake—money which is ultimately going to come from the consumers of power—and because Hydro in the past has not been all that candid in other matters.

An Expensive White Elephant

Greek Premier Constantine Caramanlis' proposal to hold the Olympic games permanently in Greece where they originated makes eminent sense. Look at the mess in the wake of the Montreal games. Twenty-nine African nations withdrew in a huff to protest New Zealand's participation in a South African rugby tour. The Soviet Union's nose is out of joint because a 17-year-old Russian athlete chose to defect. And Canada has been internationally vilified because it would not let Taiwan participate as the Republic of China — an obvious kowtow to the Peking regime which didn't even participate in the games.

Following Canada's example, the 1980 games in Moscow are fraught with political possibilities. To curry favor with Third World countries Moscow might ban any number of countries. Chile and its right-wing dictatorship, for example, would be a natural target for the Soviets.

Then there is the matter of cost to the host country. No matter how the Olympic torch is applied the citizens of Canada will be burned for Mayor Jean Drapeau's extravaganza. While Montreal's example is perhaps extreme, considering the bad management, cost overruns and racketeering which surfaced in preparing the facilities, to stage an Olympiad is very expensive for any country.

If a permanent home — and Greece seems a fitting place — was found for the Olympics much of the chronic political pettiness would be done away with. Costs for the construction of facilities could be shared by participating nations. While the idea is not a new one — it was proposed after the tragic 1972 Munich Olympics — Canada's experience is an added incentive to resolve a situation that could destroy the games in these turbulent times. And in passing, if the games are going to go back to their birthplace perhaps its time to go back to the origianl sports or at least cut out some of the bizarre interlopers such as water polo, to name only one peripheral game.

The Olympics in recent years have become an expensive white elephant where winning rather than playing the game is uppermost in the political minds of participating nations. It is time to give the games back to the athletes in ancient Greece where a good idea started.

HAROLD GREER

Judge Hits Toronto Police

TORONTO — Justice Donald Morand of the Ontario supreme court has perhaps given the politicians and public more than they want to hear in his report on metro Toronto police practices. The police, he has suggested, would do a better job and be a lot less frustrated in their work if citizens were required to produce adequate identification.

Specifically, he has recommended that Ontario driver licences carry a photograph of the driver, and that the police be given the authority to demand proof of name and address when issuing summonses against persons suspected of minor offences.

These recommendations would seem to go well beyond the terms of reference Justice Morand was given almost two years ago, which were to investigate a rash of allegations in newspaper articles of brutality and third-degree methods by metro police when sundry persons were arrested and interrogated. Morand makes a convincing argument, however, that they are germane to his inquiry even though they may not be, as he readily admits, politically popular.

Used Brutality

The sensational part of his report, of course, concerns his conclusions that in certain cases metro police officers did indeed use unpardonable force and brutality on certain suspects, that they subsequently lied about it and that there was, on the part of fellow officers and the police generally, a tendency to condone and coverup.

In this regard, Morand recommends amongst other things that an adequate citizen complaint procedure be set up and that considerably more attention be paid to the selection and training of police sergeants and other supervisory personnel. He does not stop there, however, because his inquiry persuaded him that a few instances of police brutality could not be dismissed as merely a few bad apples in the barrel.

"It became obvious to me," Morand writes, "that some police officers believe they are the only remaining barrier between the public who hired them and the anti-social persons who break society's laws. They apparently believe . . . it is necessary for them not only to investigate crimes, but to act as judge and jury." While not condoning this attitude, or suggesting it is widespread, Morand believes it probably results from the frustration which many police officers feel about their work.

This frustration appears to flow, basically, from unwarranted public criticism and a lack of public appreciation for the difficult conditions under which the police must operate. The police feel alienated from the public, often because the public has made these conditions more difficult than they have to be. Every concrete suggestion for minimizing this conflict between the police and the public therefore merits serious consideration.

Hence Morand's proposal for photographs on drivers' licences. He points out that it is apparently an easy matter for a driver whose licence has been suspended to obtain another one immediately in another name; in Toronto alone, the number of improperly licensed drivers has been estimated to be as high as 30,000. Such drivers account for a disproportionate share of traffic accidents and the police are expected to keep them off the roads, but the police cannot even be sure, when they stop drivers now, that they are looking at legitimate licences. Photographs on the licences would correct the problem.

HAROLD ADAMSON
. . . Metro Toronto police chief

Similarily, there are hundreds of offences, including all summary conviction offences under the criminal code (except where a person is found actually committing the offence). Wherein the police may not arrest suspected persons but must issue a summons to court. To issue a summons requires the name and address of the suspect, but the police have no current power to demand identification or proof that the name and address are correct. It is remarkable how many people know this, and much police and court time is wasted in sending summonses to non-existent persons at non-existent addresses.

Therefore, Justice Morand recommends, the police should have authority to demand satisfactory proof of name and address in such cases, and to detain persons until such proof is produced.

Predictably, these recommendations have brought reservations from the politicians and will no doubt bring protests from the professional civil liberterians. Spokesmen for both the Liberal and NDP opposition parties in the Ontario legislature have expressed the usual concerns that the citizen's right to privacy would be violated.

Photos Useful

Such reaction, surely, is specious and unthinking. There may be good reasons for not having photographs on drivers' licences — it might, for example, be unreasonably expensive, bearing in mind the photographs would have to be kept up to date — but the civil liberty argument is hardly one of them.

Nobody now has a "right" to a driver's licence. The law is carefully framed on the principle that driving is a privilege, which privilege can be lost or suspended if one drives irresponsibly — that is, without due regard for the safety of others. The correct identification of irresponsible drivers is therefore all important, and if this requires photographs on driver licences then it is merely an administrative device to help the police enforce the law. Photographs are required for passports, and necessarily so, and nobody seems to have discovered that their civil liberties were violated.

Besides, as Justice Morand noted, other jurisdictions (B.C. for one) have introduced driver photographs and after the initial period of objection, it turned out the public was "entirely satisfied." Many people found it was very useful for cashing cheques.

An Original

Regarding the letters from Wm. Cameron and Islander in the Times, July 28 (Ferry Lament, Stop Crying):.

Mr. Davis' remarks make about as much sense the Clarkson-Gordon report which got so much mileage a few months ago. The claim of building and maintaining a highway from Vancouver to Kamloops for Davis' price is of course complete and utter nonsense. The man is original, though. In the past we have had complaints about government by order-in-council, and various means that circumvent the democratic process. Obviously Davis is trying to pull a new one out of the hat — government by letters to the editor!

The only shortcoming being that during his tenure in the cabinet, he has yet to make a move that makes any sense.

Mr. Cameron is perfectly right when he thinks the province is in danger of becoming an elitist society. When a government violates not just most but all of its election platform and merely enacts a lot of right-wing legislation, cuts down on services to people and gives the business community all the breaks and generally subverts any progressive legislation that was passed by the former government, one can safely say that they are endeavoring to create the type of society that Mr. Cameron envisages.

On the other hand Islander makes a number of good points. Unfortunately he misses one of the main points — Victoria's changing face. When I come to Victoria nowadays, I find it hard to remember the town as it used to be. The land developers are rapidly making Victoria look like Anytown, North America. Time was when towns used to have a character all their own. Victoria possessed a unique quality, many unique qualities really, a slower pace. The town's sobriquet — city of gardens and a little bit of old England — were right to the point. It was a beautiful place to visit and to live. However, the developers seem to have taken over here, as elsewhere.

I read recently that in the next decade or so that 87 per cent of Canada's population will live in some form of apartment-type housing. This was the pronouncement of a land developer at a meeting of his contemporaries. This makes absolutely no sense to me and I would welcome some answers from interested parties. Our country has one of the lowest population densities with the second largest land area and one of the smaller populations, even though a lot of the territory qualifies as uninhabitable. — J. C. MacDonald, Vancouver.

Ugandan Relations

In view of the continuing actions taken by the present government of Uganda, which do not reflect favorably on the commonwealth of nations, the executive council of the Vancouver Island branch of the Royal Commonwealth Society wishes to commend Her Majesty's government, through the British high commissioner to Canada, for the positive and responsible action taken in withdrawing diplomatic relations from Uganda.

The executive council hopes that this action will reinforce the spirit of the commonwealth, based on respect and decency in relations amongst its members. — E. Parker, Secretary, Vancouver Island Branch, Royal Commonwealth Society.

Where's Plan?

I do wish our bickering Victoria aldermen would remember that development freeze and public ownership of the Inner Harbor waterfront was established for the purpose of providing time and talent for the creation of an overall Inner Harbor Plan. This plan, I understand, will provide full public accessibility and will have to meet with full architectural and social acceptance. It will enhance and emphasize the dignity and importance of our provincial legislative buildings. It will prevent foolish garish and vulgar development that would optically destroy the architectural elegance of Rattenbury's design. Our Inner Harbor is a unique area of potential urban beauty. It is not a pork-barrel to be bargained away piecemeal. Where is that Inner Harbor plan?

I trust that the Capital District Improvement Commission, the Victoria city planners, if there are any, and city council will not try to pass off horse-trading as planning, i.e. until "the city gets what it wants," to quote our mayor. What would it be what the city wants? Let us never have the development freeze lifted without first presenting to the public a very thorough, integrated and honest Inner Harbor plan and without first receiving for this plan the wholehearted approval and support of the citizens. — Eberhard Schulenberg, 121 Government Street.

Sweet Metrics

Metric packaging of food products is well under way, the latest to appear in Victoria being sugar. And already the Consumers' Association of Canada is receiving complaints about overpricing.

Most metric sizes in sugar packages are similar, but slightly smaller, than their counterparts in pounds. Thus a five-pound bag of sugar becomes two kilograms, or 4.4 pounds. The consumer should pay less for the two-kilogram bag than for a five-pound bag.

A similar adustment must be made for the four-kilogram bag, smaller than the 10-pound one, and the 10-kilogram bag, which is smaller than 25-pounds.

The Consumers' Association hopes that store managers and consumers will both be aware of this new packaging. Point-of-sale information in the stores should solve a lot of problems. — Barbara Leonard, 2706 Dorset Road, Publicity Chairman, CAC, Victoria.

Barn Door Slammer

In connection with the article Gov't Eyes Tourist Fund in the July 27 Times gave me the impression of shutting the barn door after the horse has disappeared. It seems so ridiculous for th Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy to meet with the president of an advertising firm to discuss the raising of $50,000 to buy air time on Vancouver radio stations to estol the attractions of Victoria when the summer is nearly gone.

One works all their life saving for a happy, relaxing retirement and a visit from family and friends only to face disappointments. This morning we received this letter from near Toronto:

"Helen and Denny and kiddies arrived home last Tuesday night. They had a wonderful trip. They didn't get over to the Island because the fare was $70 to take the trailer over and that was just far too much.

"They loved Vancouver and spent two days there strolling along the ocean and in Stanley Park."

I am a few years short of possession of a Pharmacare card and have not used the ferry system since the increase in fares, I feel that it should be considered as part and parcel of the Trans-Canada Highway. The minister of transport should have a little more consideration for the people on the Island wanting to see friends and families without having to float a loan to use the services. I am sorry Jack Davies isn't still with the Liberal party in the department of environment in Ottawa as he certainly hasn't helped the transportation situation here on the west coast. — One Who Knows.

One Nation

I have been reading the correspondence on the vexed question of bilingualism in Canada for years, and in particular the recent correspondence with M. Yvon Landry I salute M. Landry for coming 3,000 miles to learn English, although I am sure from his well-written and well expressed letters that he already knows it very well.

The section of Bill 22 dealing with schooling strikes me as unjust if it makes one ruling for the English-speaking Quebecker and another for the French-speaking. Why not let both the English and the French send their children to the school of their choice? Why make it more difficult for the French-speaking citizen to send his child to an English school, and yet give free choice to the English-speaking citizen? Why make it impossible for an immigrant knowing neither language to send his child to an English-speaking school if that is what he wants? Why does not Quebec set an example to the whole country (and do what the whole country should do) by having one bilingual school system?

As for M. Landry's last paragraph. It seems to me that the government (and the people) of Quebec, by pressuring the government of Canada to promote the cause of bilingualism in the way they are, are causing very real inconvenience and expense to the rest of Canada, including the people of B.C.

I myself, M. Landry, have no objections to a bilingual country as such, but my concept of bilingualism differs from that of the Canadian government or of the Quebec government. I think that I should be able to write and speak to you in English if that is easier for me, and that you should be able to write or speak to me in French if that is easier for you. (By the way, what is the exact definition of bilingualism? At what point does one become bilingual?) I also think that this business of middle-aged civil servants being forced to learn a second language, which they find difficult, and which they have little or no occasion to practise is absurd. I think it should be dropped, and that efforts should be made, little by little, and as teachers become available, to make the schools across the country teach in both languages, and I think that this schooling should be made a federal and not a provincial concern. In a generation or two at the most, we would be a bilingual country.

I feel very strongly that as it now stands it's divisive and inflationary, and makes a mockery of any sort of patriotism. This is one nation, not Canada and Quebec or les anglais et les Canadiens, and every effort should be made to weld this nation together, and not divide it, and sharpen and increase the bitterness of the past.— Mrs. Mollie MacGregor-Greer, 901 Island Road.

Proof of God

Regarding the editorial Mars — the Implications of July 22, the days of creation were not 24-hour days as the sun was not created until the fourth day. See Genesis 1:16 to 19.2, Peter 3:8 where it tells of the world order before the flood perishing, and the creating of a new symbolical heaven and earth wherein dwelleth righteousness verse 13. The literal earth is to abide forever (Ecclesiastes 1:4, Psalm 104:5. It says that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

It is to be wondered by what process of evolution could man come to know and write in Isaiah 40:22, in B.C. 712 that God sat upon the circle of the earth, long before man proved the earth to be round.

The wonderful fact of man being able to contact Mars is another proof of God's fulfilling of His word that knowledge would be increased which made it possible to do this (Daniel 12:4) and therefore it could be said that the implications of Mars are very good.—Miss E. France, Sidney.

The Caribbean Moving to Left

By PETER ARNETT

PORT OF SPAIN, Trinidad — The small, emerging countries of the Caribbean are moving to the left and the pace is accelerating.

They see socialism as the answer to deep problems seething beneath the tropical serenity that usually greets the tourist.

In the years since Cuba's Fidel Castro first introduced radical socialism to the region in the early 1960s, eight small former British and Dutch territories in the Caribbean have gained full independence. Six other island-states expect independence within the next decade.

The new countries inherited the multi-party system of government and left-wing politicians now either hold power in nearly all these 14 countries, share it, or are in powerful opposition.

In interviews many of these leaders saw the Cuban model of social and economic planning as a real alternative to capitalist democracy.

The United States exercised strong influence on the Caribbean for the last 200 years and has intervened many times, with the late president Lyndon Johnson declaring in 1965 after sending Marines to the Dominican Republic, "The American nations cannot, must not and will not permit establishment of another Communist government in the Western Hemisphere."

In the 11 years since then the shadow of communism has fallen on one newly-independent Caribbean country, Guyana. Bloody violence has been precipitated in Jamaica in resistance to the introduction of radical socialism. Leaders in the emerging island-states of Dominica and St. Vincent seem convinced that Marxism will be their best ideological course when they gain independence soon.

Foreign Takeovers

Common to the Caribbean is a trend toward nationalization or partial takeover of foreign business investments.

Many leaders in the British Caribbean came to power espousing one form of socialism or another, usually of the mild British variety.

Once in power, however, even moderates found themselves pushed to the left. There are few indentifiable right-wingers among the younger crop of politicians anywhere in the Caribbean.

Helping to polarize the political leaders are intractable social and economic problems.

"Capitalism has been in operation in this part of the world for some time and it has failed us," said Prime Minister Forbes Burnham of Guyana in an interview. Others interviewed in the Caribbean cited these overriding problems:

Unemployment — Populations have multiplied, overloading cities of the larger countries. Barbados has a population of 243,000 with 30 per cent of the work force unemployed. Similar unemployment figures are found among the rest of the Caribbean's 15 million people, with high densities in capitals such as Kingston, Jamaica; Port of Spain, Trinidad, and Georgetown, Guyana, and resultant high crime levels.

Emigration cut-off — The Caribbean population safety valve used to be emigration to the parent colonial country, but Britain and The Netherlands have reduced the traffic. Canada is also slackening its intake, and only the United States is continuing to absorb migrants in great numbers.

Plantations decline — Traditional sugar and banana plantation economies continue to decline because of poor world prices and reluctance of newly-independent islanders to work in the fields "because they continue to equate hard work with slavery," said a government official in Guyana.

Federation failure — The best hope for the viability of the Caribbean islands was seen in federation. Britain found that newly independent Trinidad, Guyana, Barbados and Jamaica were unwilling to work as a team. The Associated State of St. Kitts-Nevis-Anguilla, with only 60,000 people on three small islands, has already split into two parts and possibly soon into three. A similar pattern is showing up in The Netherlands Antilles. Various economic federations have been attempted, but even the Caribbean Common Market, the most hopeful indicator of economic co-operation, seems destined to fail because of traditional island rivalries.

Measured strikingly against this gloomy political and economic performance has been the example of Communist Cuba, largest of the Caribbean states, with nine million people. By employing for more than a decade the techniques of complete social planning and totalitarian control, Fidel Castro is reported to have thoroughly transformed Cuba, pouring 30 per cent of the gross national product into development, and providing free nursery schools, medical care, and education to university level.

That Castro made these achievements with around $2 million a day in Soviet aid, and at the expense of free institutions and a government more totalitarian than almost any Communist society in eastern Europe, has not dismayed his Caribbean admirers. Nor do they seem concerned that Cuba now is the leading military power in Latin America with a history of supporting subversion.

Not only have Castro's favors been accepted. His example seems to be catching on.

Setting the pace is Guyana, formerly British Guiana, on the northeast shoulder of South America. With foreign business nationalized and its 800,000 people mobilized in Marxist-Leninist lines, "Guyana will have moved into being a fairly orthodox Communist country in four or five years," says an experienced observer there.

Guyana has entered a rare period of political serenity with Cheddi Jagan, the political opposition leader and bitter Marxist opponent of Prime Minister Burnham, agreeing to unite with the government in completing the country's Marxist structure.

Jamaica, at the end of a chain of sparkling islands and 1,200 miles to the northeast, is just one-twentieth of Guyana's size but has three times the population. A sudden turn toward radical socialism by Prime Minister Michael Manley after he visited Cuba last year shocked the conservative opposition party and led to charges of Communist influences in Jamaica, and countercharges of U.S. Central Intelligence Agency involvement. The popular Manley is expected to win upcoming elections, and to resume his leftward march.

In Barbados, Prime Minister Errol Barrow allowed Angolan-bound Cuban planes to use Barbados for refuelling.

Trinidad is the most stable of the small islands, with Prime Minister Eric Williams, a moderate, bolstered in power by rich new finds of petroleum off his southwestern coast. Williams visited Cuba last year but has since voiced disapproval of Castro's foreign adventures. As in most of the islands, Williams' political opposition is to his left. Western diplomats believe he will be forced to make concessions in elections this year against a partially united opposition. The Bahamas is another centre of stability, with the government resisting overtures from Cuba, but expressing interest in nationalizing some local industries, including gambling casinos.

Golden Handshake

Surinam gained its independence from the Netherlands eight months ago, receiving a "golden handshake" in the form of a $1.7 billion aid package from the mother country. Western diplomats say the "medium-term" prospects for Surinam and its 300,000 people are excellent, but warn that there is a strong leftist trend in the powerful labor movement of this South American neighbor of Guyana, which could eventually radicalize the government and endanger large American bauxite interests. Elections later this year are expected to indicate the extent of the leftward trend.

The five British Associated States in the Windward and Leeward islands yield authority in defence and foreign affairs to London, but retain full internal power. The governments are either left wing or have radical politicians in coalition, and are expected to accept independence within the next few years. Edward Bruma, the left-wing minister of economics in Surinam, says: "We learned to live with the atom bomb; America will have to learn to live with a Socialist Caribbean."

American officials in Washington and the Caribbean expect the leftward trend to continue, with the United States unable to do much to prevent it. Castro is expected to emerge as an even more powerful figure in the region.

. . . While South America Held in Grip by Military

By JONATHAN RANDELL

RIO de JANEIRO — The durability of the military regimes that dominate South America has reduced leftist influence on the continent to its lowest ebb in decades.

Leftists have failed to reach an accommodation with the armed forces despite a variety of strategies, from coalitions with moderate civilian groups and attempted alliances with the military to guerrilla confrontations.

The military governments, meanwhile, have generally maintained themselves in power far longer than they or their opponents originally thought possible.

That longevity poses problems for the United States since it has justified its support of the military governments on the ground that they were transitional, paving the way for stable, democratic civilian governments. Such transitions have proved elusive.

"Our revolution has already done much for the moral cleansing and social and economic progress of the country," said the Brazilian Army Minister, Gen Silvio Frota, in a speech marking the 12th anniversary of the military's seizure of power, but there is still much to be done."

The gist of Gen Frota's remarks could have been delivered by ranking military officers in countries as diverse as Chile, Bolivia, Uruguay and Peru.

The military governments that control the continent except for Colombia, Venezuela and the former Guineas may differ in the immediate circumstances and ideology that brought them to power, and in the degrees of repression they have exercised. But they share a deep-seated distrust of civilian political groups and a conviction that national security and economic development are inevitably interwined.

Socially Conscious

In contrast to the military dictatorships of other eras, the armed forces of today tend to describe themselves in revolutionary terms. They all see themselves as the only institution capable of leading the economic and social transformations of their countries.

The rise of politically and socially conscious military men has its roots in the era after the Second World War. Until then the armed forces saw their primary role either as defenders against foreign aggression or as arbiters in national politics — willing to step into government temporarily before turning power over to civilians once a crisis had passed.

During the 1950s and 60s traditional concepts of national security were broadened as internal subversion came to be considered the main threat. Fidel Castro's victory in Cuba in 1959 strengthened the military men's conviction that counter-insurgency should be the foundation of national defence.

Counter-insurgency instruction — also emphasizing the armed forces' role in nation-building, relief and welfare — became an important part of U.S. military training for Latin-American officers.

The U.S. Army School of the Americas in the Panama Canal Zone has graduated more than 30,000 officers and enlisted men since its establishment in 1949. More than 180 graduates have gone on to become heads of governments, cabinet ministers, commanding generals, chiefs of staff and directors of intelligence.

VELASCO

Perhaps even more important than the counter-insurgency training has been the role of the higher military institutions. Peru's Centre of Higher Military Studies, Chile's War Academy and Brazil's Superior School of War have emphasized the new political mission of the military and the link between economic development and the battle against subversion.

"When people ask where the Peruvian revolution was born. I tell them it was mapped out here," former president Juan Velasco Alvarado said in a speech to an incoming class of officers shortly before he was deposed last year.

Speaking earlier this year at the Brazilian School, Gen. Antonio Jorge Correa, head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, emphasized the role of that academic institution in laying the theoretical foundations of the 1964 coup against President Loao Goulart.

"The leaders of the 1964 revolution, many of them founders and members of the permanent staff of this institution, found here a doctrine and a method to formulate security policies, whose application in the broader area of national politics and development politics was not difficult," Gen. Correa said.

Seize on Trouble

Most of the South American military groups reached power during political and economic crises that saw the decomposition of civilian institutions, threats to the unity of the armed forces and open appeals by civilian leaders to the military to abandon its political neutrality.

The 1973 coup in Chile that toppled the Marxist government of President Salvador Allende took place in the midst of a steep economic decline and after polarization between leftists and non-Marxists had created a non-negotiable impasse between Congress and the President. The conservative court system openly declared its repudiation of Dr. Allende after he refused to comply with judicial orders demanding the return of factories and farms illegally seized by workers.

Making a desperate gamble for political survial, Dr. Allende invited ranking officers to join his Cabinet. That participation both whetted the military's appetite for political power and spread fear among officers that the armed forces would suffer the same ideological divisions that engulfed civilian institutions.

Future Bleak For Drapeau

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — Some opinions aroused by the Montreal Olympics: 1. Jean Drapeau, hero or fool?

If Canadian athletic performance had been good, instead of poor, I think Mayor Drapeau would have floated through and past the games with more broad support than antagonism.

It needed some gold and silver medals, especially in track and field, to make many of us forget the dollar costs and the boondoggles of the facilities and staging.

Without the medals, the way ahead looks bleak for Drapeau and his reputation. In the short years the stadium grandeur will swallow the Expos and the Alouettes and their crowds. The investigations of contracts are still to come. The political bitterness of the provincial governments over future lottery arrangements seems certain to deepen until no one but the Quebeckers and Montrealers are left to pay the piper.

Even a modicum of athletic glory would have eased the pain of swallowing the deficit. Forgetting the months before the opening seemed possible briefly in the splendor and literal fact of the opening. The justification of the mayor (or the failure of it) needed more than opening awe or closing nostalgia.

2. Should we compliment or curse the CBC?

Despite its obvious technical competence and the production's deftness in whipping around the sites, the CBC was so crassly chauvinist in its main strategy that it has devastated more than Jean Drapeau.

The "hype," hour after hour, about Canadian performances, here, there and everywhere, most of them ordinary to poor, had a terrible, cumulative effect. By the last days, so many of us viewers simply wanted the action, not the Canadian clunk.

The Canadian stories, day after day, were so pathetic. The substantive sport question of the games was the extraordinary achievement of the East Germans, followed by the Hungarians, Romanians, Yugoslavs and Bulgarians. How? Why? The accomplishments of the athletes from the U.S.S.R. and the U.S.A. let alone from Canada, were pale in comparison.

Most of us keen on sports history and sport develpment knew the Canadian performances at almost every venue would be moderate, at best. Beforehand there was the record of Canadian mediocrity, measured in times, heights, distances, and placings over the past year. So was the certainty that the East Germans were going to blow aside the Russians and Yanks in event after event.

The CBC chose to focus, in an interminable hopscotch, on Canadian athletes and teams in each competition, so it ignored the main and obvious story or the one that is always there in every Olympics — i.e., the nature of each competition as witnessed by the best participants in it.

By bobbing so much, CBC TV couldn't even kindle interest, let alone understanding for so many relatively unknown sports (to Canadians) such as water polo, field hockey, team handball, volleyball, cycling in all its phases, weight-lifting and wrestling. The stress on our athletes hung an unnecessary, unfortunate attention on them.

On the plus side, CBC radio's Olympic Magazine was superb, time and again, and some of the TV people like Ted Reynolds, Brian Williams, Irene MacDonald and Roger Jackson were wonderfully enthused about the sport each was covering, not just intent on building up Canadians or making excuses for them.

3. Why so few Canadians at the games as spectators?

With the exception of cycling, the majority of spectators

DRAPEAU

at almost every event seemed to be Americans. Perhaps the arrangements to purchase tickets were too complex for the Canadians.

It's hard to believe that the costs were too high, remembering the way Canadians trekked to Expo nine years ago. Perhaps the diversity of the attractions and the relative strangeness of them threw Canadians. The blunt fact is only a small fraction of the spectators came from Canada west of Toronto or east of Rimouski. Of course TV opened up the events to all of us but for the sports organizations of the country or the federal and provincial governments which are under increasing pressure to help athletes and teams, it is sobering that so few Canadians bothered to make the journey.

One can find partial explanations for the failure to travel and spend on the Olympics in the literally awful dissension over financing and construction which filled the years from 1973 to 1976.

This uproar seems to have created a prejudice among many English Canadians that these games were really a French-Canadian show and, at that, a typical, French Canadian boondoggled "snafu".

$1.5M Contract

WINNIPEG (CP) — Manitoba Hydro has awarded a $1.5 million contract for the construction of a control structure and ice boom at Manasan Falls to Chinook Construction and Engineering Company Limited of Vancouver.

The project, on the Burntwood River near Thompson in northern Manitoba, forms part of the Churchill River diversion project.

Its purpose is to prevent excessive ice build-up in the area.

Forest Firms a Lot Better, But Not Healthy

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

This is the fifth in a series of articles on major British Columbia companies and their outlook for the remainder of the year.

The four major forest companies made a total of $37.2 million in the first half of 1976, up from $10.2 million in the same period of 1975, but still rather dismal.

The 1975 performance was so bad as to be almost unspeakable. By contrast anything looks good.

The recovery was led by MacMillan Bloedel which made $10.1 million during the six months, compared with a loss of $19.9 million in the same period last year. The 1976 performance was better by $30 million.

Crown Zellerbach increased its net earnings to $9.7 million from $9 million and Weldwood of Canada made $5.4 million; up from $4.6 million.

Surprisingly, British Columbia Forest Products had net earnings of only $12 million in the first six months, down from $16.5 million, but it was good enough to make the company the most profitable in the forest giants for the second consecutive time.

Sales by all four companies were up strongly from 1975 levels, thanks to a good first quarter, but still below expectations.

(There is a fifth major forest company, Canadian Forest Products, but it is privately owned and does not disclose its sales or profit figures. It is believed to be about the size of Crown Zellerbach.)

The four companies point to the earnings of 1974 as the level they should be near in this year of recovery. In 1974 MacMillan Bloedel had net earnings of $72.2 million. With only $10.1 million to report at mid-1976, it is far from being half way to $72 million.

The other three companies may top their 1974 earnings. Weldwood at $5.4 million is more than halfway to its 1974 level of $9.1 million and B.C. Forest Products has $12 million for the six months compared to $21 million for all of 1974. Crown Zellerbach is almost halfway to $20.2 million at $9.7 million.

The oulook for the rest of 1976 is for only very moderate improvement over the first six months.

Some company officials believe the lumber market hit its peak for the year in the first quarter and prices will be stable but soft until winter.

The companies may have to be satisfied with duplicating their performance of the first six months.

MacMillan Bloedel could be the exception. The company's 1975 loss was due to a large deficit in its transportation sector, a problem the company is trying to resolve.

When lumber prices were soaring and the bidding for freighters was fierce, the company decided to buy its own vessels. It was a good plan while the market boomed but when orders dropped off, there was little demand for the MacMillan Bloedel ships and it is expensive to have them sitting around idle.

The company has been selling some of the ships and will concentrate on those acivities it knows best, production and marketing of lumber and newsprint.

MacMillan Bloedel also has firm direction from the top after four months without a chief executive officer.

President Denis Timmis was fired in March and J. Ernest Richardson was temporary president while the company looked for a successor. U.S. lawyer C.C. Knudsen got the job on July 30.

All companies are hoping for a surge in the U.S. housing market this fall.

The demand for housing is increasing south of the border but mortgage funds appear to be going into condominiums and apartments rather than single family homes.

These require less lumber per unit than single family homes. A surge in the construction of single family homes, considered to be overdue, would return British Columbia forest companies to the more prosperous conditions of the early 1970s.

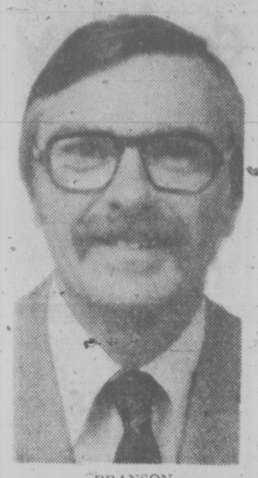
We'd Like Our Courthouse Back—Branson



BRANSON

Asking if court facilities in Victoria are adequate is a little bit like asking if Victoria is having a good summer.

The answer is no, but then that would be the honest answer in describing any system. Nothing is perfect ad everything can be improved.

But the most persistent complaint — the time it takes to bring an accused person to trial — is being tackled at the provincial court level.

Right now, cases are booked to December at provincial court, and county and supreme courts also have a heavy schedule of trials through the fall.

A committee has been formed by the Victoria Bar Association, under the chairmanship of association president, Cecil Branson, to seek solutions to the ever-widening gap between the date of the charge and the trial at provincial court.

"We hope to have some recommendations to put before the deputy attorney-general within two weeks," Branson said in an interview.

"We'd like to reduce the backlog if at all possible," he said, but the best that could be hoped for is 90 days from arraignment to trial.

He said one of the "obvious ways" to cut the time is to have greater communication and co-operation between Crown and defence counsel.

If the Crown could agree to discuss a lot of its case before the preliminary hearing, in particular, and if the defence would agree to make admissions at the preliminary hearing, "it can be shortened considerably."

Another problem being experienced is cases not being completed in the time allotted for them. He gave an example of a recent impaired driving trial in traffic court set for half a day which wasn't finished and now looks like being delayed until mid-December for completion.

One recommendation "which I am reasonably sure will go forward" is to reserve half a day each week for cases which aren't finished within the planned time.

"We are also discussing other ways of co-operating so the provincial court has a better idea of the length of a trial," he said.

One recommendation might be that one sectionn of provincial court become a remand court so that trials can begin on time and not await remands.

As to the superior courts, Branson gives a thin smile and says "they've taken our courthouse away from us. We'd like it back, thanks very much.

One year ago, courts were closed at the Law Courts Building on Burdett while work crews began adding twp new floors to the top. Appeal Court cases which used to be heard in Victoria were removed to Vancouver, and County and Supreme Courts moved to "temporary" accommodation at St. Anne's Academy, the former girls school now used for government offices, on Humboldt Street.

It had been hoped that courts might start returning to the Law Courts Building in October, but now "I can't see any court getting back until early 1977."

Branson describes the cramped, make-shift temporary accommodation at St. Anne's as "organized chaos" with many people, including court staff, lawyers and witnesses, doing their best in a bad situation.

When the superior courts do go back, there will probably be room at the Law Courts Building for two new Provincial Court rooms on the main floor. The law library on the main floor will go to the new fourth floor and the new fifth floor will be offices.

The present courts will remain, he said, except Supreme court chambers on the third floor will be enlarged.

Solution to 'Organized Chaos'?

How to Tell Habeas From Corpus

Courts and the legal profession have their own phraseology which often sounds mysterious to the lay person.

Some of the more common words — and their meaning in a general sense — include:

APPELLANT — The party appealing a decision or judgment to a higher court.

APPELLATE COURT — A court having jursidiction of appeal and review, not a "trial court."

ARRAIGNMENT — In criminal practice, the formal reading of a charge to an accused person in open court.

BENCH WARRANT — An order for arrest issued by the court itself.

BURDEN OF PROOF — In the law of evidence, the necessity or duty of affirmatively proving a fact or facts in dispute.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE — Evidence of an indirect nature from which the fact is not directly proved but may be inferred.

CODICIL — An addition or supplement to a will.

COMMON LAW — Law which derives its authority solely from use and custom or from judgments and decrees of courts. Sometimes called case law as distinct from statute law.

DECREE — Decision or order of court. Final decree is one which fully and finally disposes of litigation. An interlocutory decree is a provisional or preliminary decree which is not final.

DIRECT EVIDENCE — Proof of facts by witnesses who saw what happened or heard what was said, as opposed to circumstantial evidence, which is indirect.

DIRECT EXAMINATION — The first questioning of a witness. Cross-examination is the questioning of a witness by the party opposed to the one which produced the witness.

DIRECTED VERDICT — An instruction by the judge to the jury to return a specific verdict.

DOUBLE JEOPARDY — Common-law prohibition against more than one prosecution for the same crime, transaction or omission.

EXPERT EVIDENCE — Opinion Testimony given by person qualified to speak authoritatively by reason of special training, skill or familiarity with a subject.

HABEAS CORPUS — Name given to a variety of writs whose object is to bring a person before a court or judge. Most commonly, it directs an official holding a person to produce the person so the court may determine if that person has been denied liberty without proper process of law.

HEARSAY — Evidence which is not from the personal knowledge of the witness.

MANDAMUS —Court order compelling performance of a statutory or public duty.

NEGLIGENCE — The omission to do something which a reasonable person would do, or the doing of something which a reasonable and prudent person would not do.

NEXT FRIEND — An adult representing the interests of an infant or a mentally incompetent person who is the plaintiff in a proceeding in which the adult becomes a party to the action.

PRELIMINARY HEARING — Held to determine whether a person charged with an indictable offence should be committed for trial.

QUASH — To overthrow, vacate, annul or void a conviction, order, summons or indictment.

REASONABLE DOUBT — An accused person is entitled to acquittal if his guilt has not been proved beyond a reasonable doubt — that is, a doubt for which a reason can be ascribed, not speculation or fancy.

RE-EXAMINATION — Questioning of a witness after cross-examination by the lawyer representing the party which first examined the witness.

SUBPOENA — Order for a witness to appear and give testimony.

SUMMONS — Order that a person named in an action that he is required to appear in court and answer the complaint, or for a witness to appear.

VOIR DIRE — A trial within a trial to determine the admissibility of evidence. Juries are excluded from court in this proceeding. If the evidence is ruled admissible by the judge, the jury then hears the matter.

BEFORE THE CELL DOORS CLINK...

To David Richard Nelson, it looked like an empty house.

Needing money and not thinking he would be caught, he broke in. But he was caught.

He was arrested by passing police and later found out what most people also don't know: The Criminal Code of Canada, enacted by Parliament, sets a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

If Nelson — not a real person — had broken into a warehouse instead of a house, the maximum penalty would be 14 years.

Cecil Branson, president of the Victoria Bar Association, said the only philosophy he can think of behind Parliament's decison to make breaking and entering a dwelling more serious than breaking and entering any other premise is "a man's home is his castle."

He quickly added that he has never heard of someone getting life imprisonment for a B and E at a dwelling.

But using this charge as an example, he traced the outline of what happens to someone arrested and charged with an indictable offence.

The accused person will be fingerprinted and photographed by police and brought before provincial court the next day.

He will either have been able to talk to Legal Aid duty counsel in police cells, or been able to get in touch with his own lawyer, before court, or at court to talk to Legal Aid duty counsel.

The charge, or information, is read to him and in Victoria the practice is for him to be asked to elect trial method: Trial by judge and jury, trial by judge alone or trial by magistrate.

It is "very unusual" at this stage for someone to elect trial method unless he wants to plead guilty, in which case he elects trial by magistrate.

Sentence in that case can be dealt with immediately or, more likely, he is remanded to a future date so background material (prepared by a probation officer in a presentence report for the magistrate) can be put together.

He could be released or held in custody depending on a number of circumstances, the most important of which would be criminal record, if any, home background and circumstances of the offence.

If the accused doesn't plead guilty, he usually asks for a remand which is invariably granted. That is usually for seven or eight days and the Provincial Court judge asks if the Crown has objection to his release.

If the offence is a drug charge, or the accused is on bail for another offence, he must show cause why he should be released. Otherwise, the Crown must show cause why he should not be released.

He can be released on his own undertaking to appear again, that there be some form of surety — one or more people giving a written guarantee that if the accused doesn't live up to terms of release, they will forfeit the surety money; or cash surety may be filed with the court; or of course, a tention order may be made and he won't be released.

If a detention order is made, this can be reviewed before either a County or Supreme Court judge.

Returning to court, the accused will again be asked to choose trial method and can ask for a further remand. If he elects for his trial method, with the present crowded court calendar, it will probably be mid-December before a trial at Provincial Court can be held, or a preliminary hearing at Provincial Court can be held prior to higher court trial later, unless a preliminary hearing is waived by the accused.

Branson said if the accused is being held in custody "strong efforts" are made to bump an already-scheduled case to deal with it as expeditiously as possible.

At both the preliminary hearing and at bail reviews, the accused can (and invariably does) ask for a non-publication order which is granted, which imposes a virtual blackout of news until trial.

The accused will have a lawyer, either his own or one provided by Legal Aid. In very rare instances, the accused will represent himself.

There is "no fixed guideline" in determining qualification for a Legal Aid lawyer, said Branson. It is a subjective evaluation of a person's ability to pay.

Legal Aid is financed under a federal-provincial agreement and, recently, a substantial contribution from the provincial Law Foundation.

Recent belt-tightening in provision of Legal Aid has resulted in the virtual exclusion of all summary conviction matters where it is a first offence.

At the preliminary hearing, the Crown must establish a prima facie case — "in other words, that the accused is probably guilty." At this stage, reasonable doubt does not go to the accused but to the Crown. The accused has the right to call evidence but rarely does.

The provincial court judge will either commit the accused for trial at a higher court, or if not that could be the end of it.

But a discharge is not an acquittal, Branson pointed out.

The Crown could still lay a direct indictment in a higher court or the Crown could go before a county or supreme court judge and ask that an indictment be laid at a higher court level. This rarely happens, however.

If the accused is committed for trial, which happens in 90 per cent of cases, it will probably be two to four months before he appears for trial, either before a judge alone at County Court, or before a judge and jury at the General Sessions of county court or before an Assize of the supreme court. Most cases go to County Court.

At the higher court, a pleading is taken and generally a not guilty plea is entered although it isn't unusual for a guilty plea to be made.

The Crown presents its evidence, followed by the defence if it chooses to present evidence, followed — very rarely — by the Crown again.

If it is a jury trial, a panel of 50 or 60 men and women will have been picked by the local sheriff from the provincial voters list and that panel will be present for the list of trials set down for each General Session of county court and each Assize of supreme court.

Unlike the United States, there is very little checking by counsel of the potential jurors. The list presented to the lawyers contains the name, address and occupation of each jury panel member.

All the names, each on a separate piece of paper, are placed in a box and are drawn in groups, at random, by the Court clerk.

The Crown can stand aside an unlimited number of potential jurors but if the Crown says it is "content" then it is up to defence counsel to agree or disagree.

In the case of breaking and entering a dwelling, the defence can challenge without cause 12 potential jurors. In other cases it is less, depending on the maximum penalty for the offence.

The defence can challenge with cause an unlimited number of potential jurors but this rarely happens. When it does, two persons already picked as jurors are called on to decide the issue.

The most obvious reason for challenging a person for cause, said Branson, is bias — that the panel member is a friend of the accused or a witness or is familiar with the case itself.

Fingerprints Just One Step In Long Road

When the 12 jury members have been chosen, they are sworn in. When the trial begins, the judge will outline the respective functions of the judge and the jury in the trial — the judge alone decides points of law, the jury decides points of fact.

The trial itself is often interrupted by a voir dire, or trial within a trial, is held to determine whether a piece of evidence (often a statement by the accused to police) is admissible. This is decided by the judge in the absence of the jury but if it is ruled admissible, it is then presented to the jury.

At the conclusion of the Crown's case, the defence can make a motion that there isn't a prima facie case — that there is not sufficient evidence on which a properly-instructed jury could make a conviction.

If the judge agrees, that ends the case, subject to appeals. If not, the defence can call evidence but it is not required to and can just say the crown has not established guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

Both counsel will then address the jury and the judge will deliver his charge which includes the general law, summary of evidence and precis of the Crown and defence positions.

The case then goes to the jury which makes its decision in a private room.

If the accused is acquitted, that ends the matter, subject to an appeal by the Crown. If he is convicted, he may be sentenced then or remanded, in or out of custody, for a presentence report. This usually takes three weeks to prepare and then sentence is imposed.

If he is acquitted, the Crown may appeal to the B.C. court of appeal on a point of law alone. There is a further right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, with leave first from that court.

If he is convicted, the accused can appeal on a point of law, on mixed fact and law, and on fact.

Application for bail can be made to the B.C. Court of Appeal. He can appeal the sentence or the conviction or both.

But, said Branson, the court of appeal has the right to increase a sentence as well as reduce it although it is quite rare that sentences are increased.

As to the judges who preside at the various stages, provincial court judges are appointed in British Columbia, by the cabinet upon recommendation from the Judicial Council.

The age limit is 65 and all judges must now be lawyers, although this was not always the case and there remain three non-lawyer judges, including Judge William Ostler of the Victoria Provincial court.

Judges in all other courts — county, supreme, B.C. Court of Appeal and Supreme Court of Canada — are appointed by the Attorney-General of Canada. The age limit is 75.

PRIVATE GRANTS SAVED CHURCH

NEWMARKET, Ont. (CP) — None of the $150,000 spent to bring the 19th-century Quaker Meeting House into the 20th century was provided by any government.

Donald Laitin, clerk of the Meeting House on Yonge Street about 40 miles north of Toronto, said money came from England, the United States and Canada and from Quakers and non-Quakers.

The original building has been used since 1802 by the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers) but needed restoration.

The Quakers named their gathering places as meeting houses, which have no symbols or religious motifs.

Don Newlends, convenor of the improvement committee, said the house members were determined that restoration would not replace the old building or alter its appearance.

The building now has an up-to-date central heating unit hidden in the walls. The old foundation has been replaced with a poured concrete basement with a completely modern built-in heating unit, a kitchen, toilets and a large room suitable for lectures, games and Sunday school.

The painters matched the original shade of pink to keep authenticity of the structure.

Mr. Laitin said: "We expect the meeting house to be a busier place and it is our hope that it will be useful to the community."

This Inventor A Junk Food Junkie...

LOS GATOS, Calif. (AP) — Not to worry, that's Nolan Bushnell's philosophy. If he fails and loses his shirt, why, he'll just start all over again.

Of course, Nolan Bushnell's shirt is pretty firmly fixed on his back these days, when he's not relaxing his 6-foot-4 frame in a giant Japanese hot tub at his $160,000 home.

That's appropriate activity for a man with $10 million, he figures.

Bushnell is the 33-year-old inventor of the popular electronic paddle tennis game Pong, and head of Atari, Inc., a games company that expects to gross $39 million this year.

Meantime, while steeling himself against any unkind cuts fate may wish to deal him, it's the good life for the ex-amusement park barker.

Pong is played on a television-type screen. The players earn points trying to smack a moving, lighted blip with electronic paddles—kind of like ping-pong.

Bushnell worked his way through University of Utah as a barker, graduating in 1968 with a degree in electrical engineering. He took a job with the California electronics firm Ampex, but quit to develop an idea he had for a game—Pong.

That was four years ago. The investment, $250. A year later Bushnell bought a 41-foot boat, got divorced and plunged into a seven-day-a-week corporate pressure cooker. At that point, he said, he cried to himself, "Whoa!"

"'Wait a minute,' I said, and I asked myself: 'Does it make sense to work for the good life and not have the good life?'"

He started taking weekends off, sailing on the bay, having lunch in fashionable San Francisco hotels—always with a lady friend.

"Some ladies feel uncomfortable with me and some don't," he said in an interview. "I find the aura of power and money is very intimidating to an awful number of girls."

Six months ago he bought his Los Gatos Hills house on the San Francisco Peninsula, acquiring additional land for a tennis court and a swimming pool. The house has only two bedrooms, one of which is wall-to-wall waterbed.

Bushnell admits to a freaky attachment for hot dogs, especially kosher hot dogs, and tons of mustard which he buys by the gallon. Also, popcorn. He is crazy about popcorn.

"I'm probably the only guy who burns up an electric popcorn popper two times a year," he said. His employees jokingly call their boss the "Junk Food King."

Bushnell calls himself "basically a game player" always on the lookout for a new challenge, observing:

"One of the things that's really neat about business is that it's the ultimate game. You keep score with dollars and there are a lot of interesting people playing it."

And if it all crashes around his ears some day, he says he'll "just set up and start another game."

Immigration Rejected 732 At Douglas In July

VANCOUVER (TNS) — Immigration officers at the Douglas border crossing turned back 732 people suspected of attempting to enter Canada illegally in July.

An immigration department spokesman said Tuesday the number of rejects is normal for this time of year. It compares with 627 people turned back in June.

At the Aldergrove crossing, 132 people were turned back in July, compared with 114 in June, and at the Huntington crossing 64 were turned back in July, compared with 54 in June.

Immigration officials at Vancouver International Airport turned back 15 people in July. This compares with the rejection of about 300 foreign visitors a week from Toronto airport.

The Bureaucracy Speaks: Mass Killer Terminated

By DONALD P. BAKER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Having received no response from its registered letter ordering him to return to work, the U.S. department of state, in the emotionless manner of a huge bureaucracy, is preparing to terminate the career of missing foreign service officer William Bradford Bishop Jr.

Bishop, who is sought for the murders of his mother, wife and three sons, walked out of his office in Room 3531-A about 4:45 p.m. on Monday, March 1, complaining of a cold.

Now, five months later, the once-promising diplomatic career of Bishop is about to be officially closed.

What remains open is: Whatever happened to Brad Bishop?

Brad Bishop's 40th birthday, if he is still alive, was Aug. 1.

Investigators admit they have not a single clue to his whereabouts. Bishop has been charged formally with the murder of his mother, Lobelia, 68; his wife, Annette, 37, and his sons, Brad III, 14, Brent, 10 (who would have been 11 July 30) and Geoffrey, 5.

After five months of scrutiny, police have no more motive for the mass killings than they did the day the bodies were discovered in a fiery grave in a North Carolina swamp. There is no evidence of infidelity, or financial problems or job worries.

The one hint of a rational explanation is that it was the act of an irrational person. Investigators now know that — unbeknownest to his closest friends and associates — Bishop had seen at least three different psychiatrists in recent years.

The "working assumption" at the state department is that Bishop is alive, and out of the country. A Yale graduate with two master's degrees (in Italian from Middlebury and African studies from UCLA), Bishop held diplomatic posts in Italy, Ethopia and Botswana. He speaks Italian and Serbo-Croatian fluently.

Bishop, who held the rank of foreign service officer-4, at a salary of $25,962, was assistant chief of the special trade activities office of the state department's economic and business section. That position was filled about a month after his disappearance. His pay was stopped immediately. Until the formality of sending him notification that he was being fired for being absent without leave a couple of weeks ago, he had been listed in "over-complement status." This is jargon meaning that a spot was being held open for him should he return.

The ongoing search for Bishop is the responsibility of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, but George Quinn, agent in charge of the FBI office in Baltimore, admits that "we don't have a thing."

The last confirmed contact with Bishop occurred March 2, when he used his Bankamericard to buy $15.50 worth of sporting goods in Jacksonville, N.C., about 100 miles south of Tyrell County, N.C., where the bodies were discovered earlier that day.

"There is no question he was in Jacksonville that day," Quinn said. Investigators said it was the only known use of the credit card by Bishop, who had no other credit cards.

There have been literally thousands of reported sightings of Bishop in the intervening months, throughout the U.S. and Canada, and abroad.

The immigration and naturalization service has been alerted to watch for use of Bishop's passport, but none has been noted.

CIA RELEASES SECRET TESTS

WASHINGTON (UPI) Secret documents released today by the CIA revealed sordid details of drug behavior experiements on criminals and on both willing and unwilling American and foreign subjects.

It mentioned fruitless tests of such exotic items as love potions and a "recruitment pill."

The agency released 59 secret and "eyes only" documents, some of them heavily censored, in response to a freedom of information action brought by John D. Marks, a former state department intelligence officer and co-author of a critical book about the CIA.

Most of the abuses of the agency in the field of drug experimentation were documented in reports released earlier this year by the senate and house intelligence committees.

Central point of the new documents was dissension within the CIA over whether the exercises were "unethical and un-American,' after one experiment with LSD went sour with the suicide of a victim.

The documents revealed extensive experiments with chemical and biological substances.

An Aug. 14, 1963, CIA report on MKULTRA, the initials of an operation using chemical and biological materials to affect human behavior and physicological changes, said:

"Over the 10-year life of the program many additional avenues to the control of human behavior have been designated . . . as appropriate to investigation . . . including radiation, electro-shock, various fields of psychology, psychiatry, sociology and anthropology, graphology, harassment substances and paramilitary devices and materials."

Every Iranian Spied Upon, Expert Says

WASHINGTON (WP) — While improving economic and social conditions in Iran, the Shah also has eliminated freedom of speech and of the press and created a vast secret police network which spies on every Iranian, a congressional subcommittee was told Tuesday.

William J. Butler, a New York attorney who recently completed an 18-month study of human rights in Iran for the International Committee of Jurists, also testified that Iran has severely restricted normal political activity by creating a one-party state and used brutality in supressing workers' strikes.

Butler's testimony before the House International Relations subcommittee on International Organizations came on the evening of Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger's departure to attend a joint U.S.-Iran economic council meting in Tehran, State department testimony about human rights in Iran, a U.S. ally and the largest purchaser of U.S. arms, has been postponed because of the Kissinger trip.

In a letter last August to the subcommittee, assistant secretary of state Robert J. McCloskey said "the United States has made no representations to Iran on human rights." It is not known whether Kissinger will discuss the topic in his meetings with the Shah this week.

Butler said he was "very favorably impressed" by the Shah's land reform efforts, drives to decrease illiteracy, improvements in health and life expectancy, and greater education and rights accorded women.

However, Butler testified that:

—"There is no freedom of the press whatsoever," with smaller newspapers recently closed and larger ones rigorously controlled.

"—There is no freedom of opinion or expression." Political opposition is under " a very tight lid."

—"Trade unions are controlled by the government" and harsh measures taken against strikes.

—A one-party system was introduced last year. The Shah declared that anyone who does not enter the new party "is a traitor" who should leave the country or be imprisoned.

Butler said that SAVAK, the secret police organization created in 1957 by the Shah, employs as many as 200,000 full-time and part-time operatives in Iran and other countries including the United States. He testified that those arrested by SAVAK have no right to counsel or public trial and have been subjected to torture in many cases.

Together with a joint committee of the national police force, SAVAK conducts surveillance of all Iranian citizens, maintains "huge files" and passes on all applicants for government employment, Butler said.

STUDENT FIREMEN FLEE REAL THING

SARASOTA, Fla. (UPI) — About 30 student firemen dropped their hoses in panic when a deliberately set practice fire got "slightly out of control." Four firemen suffered burns and smoke inhalation.

Lt. G. W. Marti, one of the instructors at the two-day workshop attended by more than 100 firefighters, said: "we expected the fire to act about as it did, although it did flash somewhat faster than it should have."

The student firemen, most of them inside a burning building for the first time, dropped their hoses and rushed for the door as the room filled with smoke.

"The fire was so hot that you had to have your face directly on the floor to keep from getting burned," said instructor Bob Bullard, Longboat Fire Department Chief.

Government Stole His Inspiration

WINNIPEG (CP) — Gerry Sugiyama lost more than just his home when the wartime Canadian government removed him and his family from Vancouver 34 years ago.

He lost the sea, a setting he used to draw on for inspiration to carve small wooden copies of boats and ships.

Sugiyama lives in the Charleswood area of Winnipeg now, about as far removed from the ocean as possible. But his interest in the sea has remained intact through the years and is about to yield results in the form of a working model of a tugboat he started building nine years ago.

The 60-pound copy is the kind of boat that used to fascinate Sugiyama as a boy. It is steam-powered, 50 inches in length and was assembled during long winter evenings. Its hull, deck, deckhouse and fittings were made in his basement workshop.

The plans for the tug, called Master, were based on a photograph he took while visiting the Vancouver waterfront in 1967. Although he sent several letters to the West Coast, he was unable to acquire the actual plans for the Master, a tug that hauled logs and barges with other boats on the lower B.C. coast.

Without the plans, he says much of the ship was built on sheer guesswork by using the detailed photograph.

Sugiyama, an engineer, is slightly dissatisfied with the hull shape and the draft, although the working model shows no evidence of lack of data.

"It was top heavy, a little error in my design," he says. "I should have been able to get away with using a five-pound ballast but had to use 20 pounds."

He says he used miles of cedar stripping to build up the hull. The deck is made of polished cherrywood cut from scraps.

The boat is powered by gasoline or propane, depending on Sugiyama's choice of burners. The fuel heats water in a copper boiler stressed to a pressure of 100 pounds.

"It doesn't get nearly that high, though," he says. "The engine goes crazy at five or 10 pounds."

The steam pumps two pistons in a small engine that turns a propeller shaped from scrap brass. To control the boat, Sugiyama plans to attach the lines to a relay and run it by radio control.

Building the boat was difficult in itself, Sugiyama says, but finding a place to operate it also posed problems. He conducted a test run on a lake when the boat was half finished, but the propeller tangled with weeds.

"You need water about 2½ feet deep. You need hip waders and no people around in case there's an accident or it blows up."

HUGE SHIP AT NANAIMO

The huge 700-foot freighter MS Warshau has arrived in Nanaimo and is taking on a load of lumber, plywood and pulp for MacMillan Bloedel.

Nanaimo spent $60,000 to lengthen a wharf to handle the 49,000-ton vessel.

It will take on two million board feet of lumber, 11,000 tons of pulp and a smaller load of plywood before moving to Harmac to add another 9,000 tons of pulp.

It will also make stops at Crofton and Port Alberni for more pulp loads before heading to the United Kingdom and Western Europe.

The ship was built in West Germany this year and is being leased by the company.

HOW TO MIX A HORSESHOT

Its name not withstanding, the Horseshot is not a case for the veterinarian, but rather a mixed drink of the Smirnoff school, a sort of Bloody Mary with the extra flavour kick of horse radish.

But the Horseshot is no second runner. With a charm and nip all its own, this great red beauty can keep up with the best of them.

To make a Horseshot, pour 1½ oz. Smirnoff into a tall glass with ice, fill with tomato juice, add horse radish to taste and stir. Sip slowly.

More Frequent Buses

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A greater frequency of buses and minimal "layover" time in the downtown area will be among the transit service improvements when an extensive rescheduling of routes becomes effective in the Victoria area Sept. 3, a B.C. Hydro official told city aldermen Tuesday.

Operations superintendent George Seright said one of the main advantages for travellers on the several routes affected will be a stepped-up frequency of service to a 15-minute interval between buses, instead of the present 20-minute pattern — or four buses per hour instead of three.

Running time will be reduced to eliminate waiting time at the downtown termini, and drivers will have their "recovery time" at the outer suburban termini, Seright told the city's traffic committee.

In addition, he said, peak-hour crowding should be eased because Hydro plans to use its new 40-foot buses on routes that can accommodate them. These can carry 49 to 53 passengers, compared with the 24-passenger capacity of the standard 35-foot buses.

Most of the changes involve connections between routes in the city centre.

One major change will see the Haultain bus travel through the city to Fort, then east to Fernwood crossing Pandora before continuing on the regular Haultain route. Inbound, it will cover the same route to Yates and through the city to Gorge.

Seright noted that Haultain passengers will no longer be able to travel direct to the legislative buildings, but will have to transfer at the Douglas-Yates terminus.

No service through the Mayfair shopping centre would be available after 6 p.m.

Teens' Pop Stand Stays

A group of Sidney teens will be able to operate their pop stand for the duration of the summer after Sidney council waived a special bylaw Tuesday.

The concession stand operated by Sidney Teens Action Group (STAG) was ordered dismantled Friday by clerk Geoffrey Logan, but council reversed that decision at a special meeting Tuesday.

Acting mayor Richard Leigh said today the stand was not causing a traffic problem and the organizers had already gotten clearance from the health board.

So council waived the bylaw prohibiting business on a public right of way and ordered STAG to get a business licence. The stand can continue until September 15, on the condition the site remains clean and litter-free, said Leigh.

Set up beside Ocean Avenue and the Washington State Ferries terminal, the catering service was started by the group to raise funds to sponsor teen activities.

The STAG members had already bought coffee, soft drinks, doughnuts and chocolate bars to serve ferry passengers in lineups.

MALL CAFE SOON?

The first sidewalk restaurant on the Government Street Mall may be in operation later this month, if Victoria city council approves a recommendation from its roads and underground services committee.

But Sam's Deli, located in the Belmont Building at 805 Government, will be able to offer its customers outdoor dining for little more than a month.

In approving the restaurant's application to install a platform on the sidewalk to accommodate chairs and tables, the committee stipulated Tuesday that the structure can remain there only from May 1 to Sept. 30.

Bruce Housser, the new owner of the establishment, had explained that the platform was essential to compensate for the slope of the street at that point. The platform would be two feet above grade at the south end.

Committee chairman Ald. John Hayes said he was in favor of approving the application on a 12-month trial basis, but Ald. Alf Hood said that would be foolish and unnecessary.

"No one is going to sit there in the pouring rain," he said, and the dias would be an unused and annoying intrusion on the sidewalk for eight months of the year.

After initial opposition to the concept of outdoor eating establishments on the mall, council recently approved the idea in principle and laid down guidelines for their operation.

Recreation Vote Set

Central Saanich residents will vote Sept. 25 on a proposed $750,000 recreational centre that would be built in Centennial Park.

Date for the referendum, which if passed will add about three mills to individual tax bills, was set Tuesday by municipal council.

Council decided to hold the vote in September rather than in conjunction with the November municipal elections to allow for an early construction start if approval is given the project.

Route Seems Doomed

A B.C Hydro transit plan to extend its Mount Tolmie No. 4 bus route appears doomed after neighborhood complaints and municipal planning opposition before Saanich council Tuesday.

Aldermen decided not to endorse the proposal, which would have seen the No. 4 bus re-routed from its old terminal at St. Aidan's Church to travel along Palo Alto, Mortimer, Ansell and Midgard.

In reviewing the plan, the municipal planning department noted that the idea was to relieve overcrowding on the Shelbourne fast bus by stimulating use of the Mount Tolmie service.

But it also said the roads involved in the proposed extention are narrow and not built to handle heavy traffic and it recommended council not endorse the plan.

Aldermen were told that neighbors opposed the extention because they feared vibrations could damage their houses or compound flooding problems in the area. Buses would produce a traffic safety problem on the narrow streets as well.

Whether council's lack of endorsement is enough to kill the plan remains to be seen. One neighbor told council that a B.C. Hydro official told him no extention would be approved without agreement from Saanich while a Saanich official told him the decision was one to be made by B.C. Hydro.

Rezonings Get Mixed Reactions

Rezoning applications to allow building a small apartment on Inverness west of Quadra and to expand the parking lot at the Royal Oak shopping plaza cleared one hurdle Tuesday.

At the same time as Saanich council voted to hold public hearings on them, it turned down applications which would have led to a condominium duplex at Quadra and Nicholson and a garden centre at Royal Oak.

In the case of the proposed rezoning at Quadra and Nicholson, in an application from C. E. Warren and D. M. Mackillop, aldermen overrode a favorable recommendation from their planning department.

A department report noted that while siting of the duplex did not meet the recommended 10-foot sideyard requirement, it did meet requirements of the zoning bylaw.

The Inverness rezoning would see a 13-unit apartment built on the .34-acre property, which is owned by B. E. Butler Construction. At the Royal Oak shopping centre, .8 acres alongside Viewmont would be added to the centre's parking lot.

A rezoning application from R. A. Pederson on the other side of the Viewmont did not fair so well. Council agreed with the recommendations of its advisory planning commission and planner and rejected it, noting past policy has been to restrict commercial development to the east side of Viewmont.

Pederson wanted to locate a garden centre and florist shop on the property.

Party Caution Given Jaycees

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Repeated complaints from neighbors about rowdy parties at the Jaycee Hall produced a lot of tough talk from Saanich council Tuesday, including a threat to block liquor permits there.

But in the end, aldermen decided to give the Junior Chamber of Commerce until the end of September to bring under control functions in the hall at Quadra and Lodge.

The Jaycees lease the hall for some occasions but a neighbor said Tuesday most of the latest noisy parties were Jaycee affairs.

Jack Fry, of 1083 Lodge, told council of the "yelling, swearing and gunning of engines" which goes on as parties break up as late as 3 a.m.

"They've named themselves right — they're still juniors who haven't grown up," he said of the Jaycees.

Similar complaints to council in May led aldermen to institute a probationary period for hall activities. A police department report said there have been eight occasions in the past 10 weeks when officers have been called to the hall.

Neighbors also complain of headlights beamed into their bedroom windows as party-goers head home and of the hall's property being used for storing rolls of wire. A promised fence has never been built, they said.

Among suggestions from aldermen: council instruct the police department to withhold the required signature for liquor permits, or permits require parties to end at midnight.

Council finally decided on another two months of watching, with police to keep an eye on activities and the municipal administration to check on whether the property owners have met all rezoning conditions, such as building a screening fence.

Meanwhile, Jaycee president Steve Shea said today his organization is baffled about the "so-called incidents."

Apart from a Nieghborhood Watch meeting, which is run by Saanich police, Weight Watchers' meetings and gatherings of a dog obedience club, the hall hasn't been rented since June 26, he said.

The complaints seem to centre around one neighbor and there doesn't appear to be anything the Jaycees can do to make him happy, Shea said.

The president did say there was one incident four months ago in which a large rowdy crowd spilled out onto the streets and he conceded it was "really bad."

But since then, the Jaycees hav been highly selective in their rental policy. The hall is rented not to make a profit but to try and defray expenses, he said.

McKENZIE SAYS HE'S SORRY

Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie has apologized for statements in a Victoria Times article concerning Ald. Bob Wright's role in a Wharf Street development proposal and his alleged links with developer Hans Hartwig.

The written apology from McKenzie reads:

"I, Alderman Ronald McKenzie, wish to make it clear that at no time did I intend any reflection on the character or reputation of Alderman Wright, nor did I intend any imputations or allegations against him. If such an impression was created I unresevedly withdraw them and apologize. I accept that Alderman Wright was not influenced in any way by improper motives and all allegations to the contrary are without foundation. I accept that there was not and is not any improper connection between Alderman Wright and the developer, Mr. Hartwig."

Keep 'Freeze' Council Told

The development freeze now covering much of Victoria's Inner Harbor must not be lifted until a comprehensive plan for the area has been prepared and received full public support, says a concerned resident in a letter to Victoria city council.

Eberhard Schulenburg, 121 Government Street, who has spoken out at many public hearings on waterfront development proposals, says the Inner Harbor is a "unique area of potential urban beauty," and is not "a pork barrel to be bargained away piecemeal."

His letter, which was given the perfunctory "received-and-filed" treatment by council's central area development committee on Tuesday, is an obvious reference to the recent controversy surrounding an apartment development proposal on Wharf Street.

City council last week asked the provincial government to lift the development freeze and heritage designation on the property, once a satisfactory land-use contract has been worked out with the developer.

Most council members regard the request as a preliminary move involving no commitments, but two have called it premature and dangerous, pointing out that the city could be losing its bargaining powers.

Schulenburg states: "I do wish our bickering Victoria aldermen would remember that the development freeze and public ownership of the Inner Harbor waterfront were established for the purpose of providing time and talent for the creation of an over-all Inner Harbor Plan."

Among other benefits, such a plan would provide full access to the waterfront for all citizens; "enhance and emphasize the dignity and importance" of the legislative buildings; and prevent "foolish, vulgar and garish" development.

But where is that plan?

Schulenburg adds: "I trust that the Capital District Improvement Commission, the Victoria City planners, if there are any, and city council will not try to pass off horse trading as planning, i.e. 'until the city gets what it wants,' to quote our mayor.

"What would it be that the city wants?"

There was no committee discussion on the letter.

Trident a Target to Help Us Remember

God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
Beneath whose awful Hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget — lest we forget!

Rudyard Kipling wrote those lines back in 1897.

We hear them, now and then, as we honor the dead of the wars of the world. But we forget.

Between the yearly dawn services, we never remember the horrors, the killing, the bodies on the battlefield.

You didn't know that this Friday is Hiroshima Day or that next Monday is Nagasaki Day, did you? No, and neither did I — until someone who hasn't forgotten told me.

On Aug. 6, 1945, a U.S. Army plane dropped a single atomic bomb on the centre of the Japanese city of Hiroshima. The bomb destroyed 4.7 square miles of the city. An estimated 70,000 people were killed or missing and another 70,000 were injured by the blast.

Three days later, on Aug. 9, 1945, another atomic bomb was dropped on the city of Nagasaki. Japan surrendered to the Allies on Aug. 14, 1945.

That second bomb devastated 1.8 square miles of Nagasaki, killing 40,000 at least and wounding another 40,000.

Thousands more died later from the effects of radiation in both areas.

Although the world has trembled since at the thought of another nuclear bomb being dropped, still the arms buildup has continued.

Now, 31 years after Hiroshima, concerned people — many of them Canadians and some of them from Victoria — are refusing to forget and are trying to ensure that it never happens again.

These people are members of Pacific Life Community and their target is the Trident nuclear submarine base being built in Bangor, Wash., only about 60 air miles from Victoria. They want construction at the base halted and believe they can achieve it with "an intensive, widening nonviolent campaign."

On Sunday, PLC members and anyone else who wants to tag along will march their Trident monster — a 550-foot-long conglomeration of bamboo poles and plastic with black strips (representing the 408 warheads each 550-foot submarine will carry) blowing in the wind — over the U.S. border to Blaine.

Says Vancouver PLC spokesperson Jim Douglass:

"We shall march the Trident Monster across the border in dedication to the purpose: No more Hiroshimas! No more Nagasakis! Stop Trident now!"

"The U.S. Government plans to begin sending the Trident submarine, the world's most destructive weapons system, across the Canadian border in April, 1979, on Trident's way to the Pacific Ocean," Douglass points out. "Trident will cross without the U.S. having sought prior permission of the Canadian people or government, just as it has sought no Canadian permission for the building of Trident's base less than 50 miles south of the border."

Once across the border, the Canadians will be joined Sunday by American PLC members and the "Monster" will then be transported to Bangor for a demonstration in front of the Trident base gates.

There will be other "actions" on Friday (to mark Hiroshima Day) and on Monday (Nagasaki Day) by Victoria, Vancouver and American members of the PLC. The PLC people are keeping quiet about these actions. They want them to be a surprise.

You can't help feeling they are beating their heads against the iron railings of the Trident base fence in vain, though. It's a matter of economics, the mighty power of money. It's David and Goliath in the extreme.

The Pacific Life Community doesn't even have enough money to be able to send a member over to Japan later this month for the world conference against atomic and hydrogen bombs, as it would like to do.

The U.S. Government is pouring billions of dollars into the Trident base to ensure a superior system to the Russians.

Although they are already far ahead of everyone, the Americans certainly have no intention of slowing down the arms race. They are, in fact, speeding it up.

Only last week in the Times, a story from San Diego told of the Americans' boast of a super robot plane that can carry a nuclear bomb and never misses its target. Now that's comforting.

The plane, which is actually called a cruise missile and has no human pilot, is still in the test stage. But already America's second-ranking defence executive, William P. Clements Jr., has been quoted in the Washington Post as saying that billions of dollars will be spent on the cruise missle if it continues to fulfil its technical promise.

"Our technology is, at least in my judgment, 10 years ahead of the Russians," said Clements, "and I would look for the gap in our favor to continue over time."

Another comforting thought. And the operative word there is "continue." There is not the slightest intention of even a lull, let alone a halt, in this insane race. Trident nuclear submarines; cruise missiles that never miss; and billions of dollars. And sure as hell the Americans aren't going to let a handful of poverty-stricken idealists put them off that path.

Yet still they try, as indeed one must if one is to have an ideal.

The PLC people know that whatever they try at the base could lead to prison. This week, three PLC members are being tried in Seattle federal court after a fence-cutting incident at the base in May.

But, whether it's cutting the fence, breaking onto the base and planting a peace garden, or chaining themselves to the main gate, the PLC people believe it's the right thing to do to bring it before the public.

And it's all symbolic.

A Victoria PLC member put it simply:

"We're saying that we're willing to give up our freedom to defeat this monster which is cutting into the freedom of the whole world."

Active in the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' Union and in 1936 with the just-formed International Woodworkers of America, Morris was employed by Comox Logging and Railway Co. at Ladysmith (now Crown Zellerbach), eventually became president of Duncan Local 1-80 IWA, a union field representative, regional president and then regional vice-president of the labor congress, to which he was elected president in 1974. He is 63.

Q. In the U.S. which is the Hawkeye State? P.T.

A. Iowa, also known as the Corn State. The Hawkeye nickname is believed to honor Black Hawk, a famous Indian chief.

Q. Can you tell me when the Iron Age started? M.M.

Q. Where and when will the next world exhibition (Expo) be held? P. A. H.

A. A category I world exhibition has been tentatively set for Los Angeles in 1981. Special category exhibitions have also been tentatively set for Australia in 1987 and Hungary in 1978, the latter being arranged around a horticultural theme. An application has also been made to have a special category world exhibition in 1982 at Knoxville, Tenn.

Dillon Sees Tough Series

There are several reasons Victoria Shamrocks should be favored to defeat Vancouver Burrards when the two Western Lacrosse Association clubs meet in the opening game of their best-of-seven semi-final playoff series at Memorial-Arena tonight starting at 8 p.m.

1. The Shamrocks defeated Burrards in all six games between the clubs during the regular season.

2. The Shamrocks finished 17 points ahead of the defending Mann Cup champions.

3. The Shamrocks have lost only one game at home this season.

4. Burrards have lost their last eight league games.

5. Burrards are hurting because of injuiries.

It's all very impressive. But the Shamrocks refuse to believe it themselves.

Coach Nirmal Dillon said Tuesday: "We know the Burrards are a much better team than the statistics say they are; and they'll be tough to beat in this series just as they were tough during the regular season.

"We certainly aren't taking them lightly," he added. "They are a good club and there is no way we will be over-confident."

The Irish for their part are in good shape for the playoffs after winning their first league championship since 1957.

Only defenceman Tom Black is a definite non-starter because of torn knee ligaments. That is the bad news. The offsetting good news is that sharpshooting Ron MacNeil, who has missed the last three Irish games because of business commitments, will be back in uniform for the series.

Jack Kastelein, who was hurt in last week's brawl with Burrards and subsequently taken to hospital for examination, will also be in uniform for the Rocks. Not dressing tonight are Jeevan Dillon and Dennis Somner.

Dillon wouldn't say who would be playing goal as he makes that decision just before game time. But both regulars, Skip Chapman and George Grover, are fit and could even divide duties if necessary.

For the Burrards there is one surprise, but not totally unexpected. Goalie Don Hamilton, who was instrumental in the club's Mann Cup win last year, and subsequently retired, has since unretired and will be replacing the injured Pat Safianuk.

In addition, Burrards plan to call up junior star Rico Bellusci as Pat Differ is suffering from a separated shoulder, Gerry Pinder an injured leg and Bob Salt a troublesome elbow.

Second game of the series is scheduled for Richmond, Friday, with the third game at Memorial Arena Sunday.

The Bubble Breaks

Detroit rookie pitcher Mark "The Bird" Fidrych got a gummy nose Tuesday night when he faced the New York Yankees. His bubble broke and the Yankees went on to score a 4-3 victory, thanks to home runs by Roy White and Oscar Gamble. (AP wirephoto)

Yanks Seed Mound, Get to 'The Bird'

By The Associated Press

Mark Fidrych is usually the main attraction when he pitches, but the New York Yankees won't be upstaged by the Birdman of Detroit.

The Yankees showed Tuesday night that they also have a flair for showmanship, sprinkling beans on the mound while the renowned "Bird" was performing.

While the Yankees fed Fidrych "bird seed," Fidrych was feeding the Yankees fastballs. Both Roy White and Oscar Gamble hit them out of the park, helping New York to a dramatic 4-3 victory over the Detroit tigers and their flashy rookie.

"I would have loved to beat the Yankees," said Fidrych. "The crowd didn't come out to see me. They came out to see the Yankees beat me."

Whatever the crowd of 44,909 came out for at Yankee Stadium, they weren't disappointed. They not only got to see their Yankees win, but they also saw Fidrych's showy routine of talking to baseballs bouncing around the field like a berserk billiard ball and, yes, even eating beans off the mound.

Fidrych, who also gave up a two-run homer to White in the third, suffered only his fourth loss against 11 victories and it marked the first time the flamboyant rookie was defeated when Detroit had scored a run.

In other games, Kansas City Royals defeated Minnesota Twins 7-1, Cleveland Indians blanked Boston Red Sox 1-0, Milwaukee Brewers downed Baltimore Orioles 4-2, Oakland As tripped Chicago White Sox 7-3 and California Angels shut out Texas Rangers 4-0.

In the National League, Pittsburgh split a doubleheader with St. Louis Cardinals, winning the first game 2-1 and then dropping the nightcap 4-2.

In other games Los Angeles edged Houston 2-0, Cincinnati blanked San Francisco 9-0, Chicago beat Philadelphia 4-0 in the first game of a double bill and the Phillies captured the second 8-5; Atlanta topped San Diego 7-3 and New York edged Montreal 9-8.

JENNER IN BIG TOWN FOR A LOOK AROUND

NEW YORK (UPI) Bruce Jenner, a simple, unaffected Olympic superstar, was in town Tuesday looking over some of the movie, television, commercial and book offers being thrown his way.

"I'm still the same type person I was in Tarrytown (N.Y.)," the 26-year-old decathalon gold medalist said with a smile, "If somebody had told me I'd be up here today, I would've said 'you're erazy. No way. Not me.' "

Jenner, with a big arm around his wife, Chrystie, talked to reporters in a midtown public relations office.

"I'm not thinking about it that much," he said. "We're living so high on the wind, we don't want to get anything out of perspective."

Acting is one possibility for Jenner's future.

"If I can do a good quality job, then yes. I'm the type of person who needs a challenge," he said, but he added quickly, "I can't see myself in a Tarzan movie."

For 25-year-old Chrystie Jenner, a stewardess who supported Jenner through years of training, being Mrs. Superstar wasn't always sweetness and light.

"Everything he needed came first," she said. "That can be a little hard on a personal relationship. But I'm not one to be pitied. I'm really a happy lady. Now I'd like to kick back for a year and have fun."

Kevin Aims at 600

Kevin Alexander scored twice in classic fashion — his 99th and 100th goals of the season — and added four assists to bolster his Canadian junior record points total while helping Victoria McDonalds to a 22-8 Western Canada Junior Lacrosse League victory over Coquitlam J-Hawks.

It was the final home game for the regular season in Esquimalt Sports Centre for Bakers and Alexander was named the most popular player after ballots from the season-long voting by fans were counted. Team captain Bob Cool was second and Ken King third.

Alexander's six points boosted his season record to 215, eight more than the mark he established last year.

He now has 598 career points and will have a chance to top the 600 plateau when Bakers visit Salmonbellies in New Westminster for the final regular schedule game Friday.

Alexander's two goals came within 90 seconds of each other near the end of the second period. Five fakes left Coquitlam netminder Sean Flannery badly out of position and Alexander easily scored the first one. The Second came on a behind-the-back shot.

Jim Boyd, a 17-year-old, led all scoring Tuesday as coach Bill Munroe gave his younger players more than the usual amount of floor time. Boyd came up with four goals and an assist while Bakers were taking period leads of 8-1 and 13-4.

Steve Buckley and Kevin Kennedy scored three goals each for McDonalds while Tej Labh and Dave Lowden connected twice each and singles were added by Cool, King, Jerry Cadwallader, Joe Mottishaw, Scott Browning and Roy Sinden.

Cool, who is second to Alexander in the league scoring race, now has 68 goals and 105 assists.

Neil Cunningham (2), Doug Ramsay, Eric Otterstrom, Wayne McAuley, Rick McLeod, Rod Broomfield and Colin Broomfield scored for J-Hawks.

Al Radley and Mickey Michaux combined for 39 stops in the Baker net while Flannery blocked 40 shots for Coquitlam.

Riders, Bombers Show Grid Punch

Saskatchewan Roughriders ended the invincibility of Ottawa Rough Riders and Winnipeg Blue Bombers served notice they could also be a power in the West in Canadian Football League action Tuesday night.

The Roughriders went into the home of the Ottawa team, winner of its first two games, and emerged with a well-earned 29-16 victory while the Bombers ran roughshod over Calgary Seampeders, 49-3.

For Saskatchewan it was their second win. They defeated B.C. Lions 35-8 and then lost to Montreal Alouettes 26-17. Ottawa previously had beaten Hamilton Tiger-Cats 42-16 and Winnipeg 38-27.

It was Winnipeg's first win, the Bombers also losing earlier to Toronto Argos.

Ron Lanscaster was the difference in Ottawa. He picked the Ottawa defence apart completing 21 of 30 passeis for 325 yards.

Saskatchewan led all the way after taking a 7-0 lead in the first quarter when fullback Steve Molnar crashed over from the four-yard line for his first of two touchdowns. Lancaster then hit Rhett Dawson with a long pass and the western Riders were on top 13-0. Ottawa replied with a touchdown of its own before the half. Art Green going over from the four-yard line. It was 13-8 at the half with Ottawa getting a single before the intermission.

In the second half Saskatchewan got the only real break it needed when an apparent Ottawa touchdown by Moody Jackson was called back on a rough-play call against Ottawa.

Quarterback Condredge Holloway, who replaced Tom Clements at quarterback for Ottawa, was intercepted by Lorne Richardson after Ottawa had moved into scoring position at the Saskatchewan 27 and Richardson ran the ball out to the 23 and Lancaster took over from there. He engineered a march that was climaxed when Molnar plunged over for his second touchdown.

Holloway got off a touchdown pass to Gabriel with seven minutes left to play, but Ottawa's final bid went fluttering some five minutes later when Cleveland Vann picked off another Holloway pass and scamepred 20 yards into the end zone.

The Bombers broke it open against Calgary in the second quarter as they scored 20 points while Calgary could only muster a field goal. That made it 27-3 at the half and the Bombers added three more touchdowns in the final quarter. Tom Scott got the first-quarter touchdown for the Bombers and Richard Crump the second. Bob Larose took a pass for the third touchdown and Bernie Ruof kicked field goals of 37 and 19-yards to give the Bombers their 27-3 margin at the intermission.

Cyril McFall kicked the field goal for Calgary.

Walker Eyes Record

PHILADELPHIA (AP) After taking the Olympic gold medal in the 1,500-meter race, rangy, long-maned John Walker of New Zealand announced he was "two seconds better . . . than last year" when he broke the world mile record in Sweden with a clocking of 3:49.4.

Walker gets a chance to make good his boast tonight when he steps onto the new all-weather track at the University of Pennsylvania's Franklin Field to stave off the efforts of four sub-3:54 milers.

Among those competing against Walker will be West German Olympian Tom Wessinghage and Paul Heinz Wellman, who won the 1,500 bronze; Eamonn Cougian, who ran fourth in the Olympic race; Marty Liquori, recovered from the hamstring pull that kept him off the Montreal track, and fellow New Zealander Rod Dixon.

Not testing Walker will be Filbert Bayi of Tanzania, who held the record until the Swedish meet. Tanzanian officials say Bayi cannot run in any race with Walker because New Zealand sent a sports team to South Africa, the same reason why the two men did not meet at the Olympics.

Stockers Take Playoff Lead

North Americans, sparked by the two-hit pitching of Debbie Derkson, tripped MacDonalds Furniture Juniors 3-2 Tuesday night in the opening game of their best-of-three Victoria Senior Women's Softball league playoff final at Hyacinth Park.

Miss Derkson also drove in what turned out to be the winning run by singling to score Maureen Schmit with two out in the seventh inning.

Juniors took a 2-0 lead in the fourth inning on a single by Nacy Beale, a double by Janice Breeden and an error but Stockers came back to tie the game in the fifth frame on a single by Kay Kaminski, an error and singles by Miss Schmit and Maxine Stovel.

The second game of the series is tonight at 6:30 in Hyacinth.

MacDonalds Furniture Seniors edged London Boxing Club 6-5 in the opening game of the best-of-three consolation finals.

At Central Park, Mike's Sport Shop downed Victoria Molsons 6-3 in the final regular-schedule game of the Stuffy McGinnis Men's League season.

Mike Lee came up with a grand-slam home run in the sixth inning to give Mikes the victory.

Matthews Heating and Juan de Fuca Builders open a junior playoff tonight at 6:45 at Central. The all-star game and awards night will be staged Friday and playoffs opened Monday with league-champion Seaboard Construction facing 1975-champions Ingraham Hotel in the first game.

In Heywood Men's League play Tuesday, Bob Fetterley pitched a three-hitter and League-champion Stockers struck out 14 batters to lead Hygrade Radio to an 8-3 triumph over Remco Office Supplies at Heywood Avenue Park. Fetterley also contributed a single and a double to the offence.

Somebody Is Not Telling the Truth

SEOUL (UPI) — One of the two co-promoters of Sunday's controversial World Boxing Council (WBC) super-bantamweight title fight accused American referee Larry Rozadilla Wednesday of lying about what happened in the match.

Promoter Yoo Jong-Bae told UPI Rozadilla was never subject to any threat, duress or coercion when he reversed his verdict and gave the victory to challenger Yum Dong-Kyun of South Korea.

"Rozadilla wrote a statement saying he made a scoring mistake when he gave the fight to defending champion Rigoberto Riasco (of Panama) — voluntarily and not under coercion," Yoo said.

"It is true that he was asked to write a statement in the ring and there were many sports writers and boxing officials in the ring at the that time, but no gangsters. And a formal statement was written later in his hotel room."

Rozadilla, who returned home to Los Angeles Tuesday, told newsmen he was forced to change his verdict under threat of death. "If I hadn't signed, I would have been killed and so would Riasco," Rozadilla said.

The American referee said he was beaten and dragged back into the ring by strong-arm men associated with the promoters of the fight and forced to sign the statement reversing the decision.

"I had no gangsters with me" Yoo said. "and what about the statement he volunteered to write when we returned to his hotel? There were only five of us — Rozadilla, WBC Vice President Jose Guerra, an interpreter and two other boxing officials.

"He wrote a statement in the room admitting that he had made a scoring mistake, and it was a long one. He voluntarily wrote it, signed it and handed it to Mr. Guerra. And now he says he wrote the statement under threat and coercion."

Would-Be Jockey Faces Problem —She's Never Been on a Horse

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Yu Li Cullivan came to the heart of Bluegrass country to realize her dream of becoming a jockey. But she faces one hurdle.

She's never been on a horse.

She says she'd been dreaming for months about becoming a jockey and decided last week to make her move. She boarded a plane last Friday in Iowa and flew to Bluegrass Airport here.

Wearing a new pair of blue jeans and borrowed cowboy boots, the 5-foot mother of three at least looked like a jockey.

She says she's still nervous around horses "because they're so big" and she was afraid at first of being kicked.

But then she saw a horse up close for the first time, touched it, and already feels more comfortable about her ambition. "I feel different now," she said. "I feel the horse is very honest with me."

What gave the 33-year-old native of Taiwan the idea she could become a jockey without ever having ridden a horse?

She just decided to take the chance on making her dream come true, despite opposition from her husband, from whom she's separated. She feels she's being guided by a higher force, a holy spirit, she said.

"I think about it day and night," she said of her dream. "The horse's hair shining and me in jockey's colors riding him."

The dream apparently was strong enough to send her to a place where she knew no one. She said she came here because someone told her there were a lot of horses in Lexington.

She said she almost didn't get from Cedar Rapids to Lexington because she had to change planes at Chicago and didn't know how.

She didn't know where she would stay when she got here, either.

But despite the lack of certainty and her limited financial resoures, she doesn't seem too concerned.

"I'm just going to plan day by day," she said.

A dispatcher for the airport limousine service got her settled in a motel for the weekend, and a woman she met at the Kentucky Training Centre took her in Monday.

Mrs. Daniel Lotero, whose husband trains race horses, said she told Yu Li that "you can't just walk in and be a jockey. You've got to start at the bottom."

That didn't seem to discourage the young woman, and Mrs. Lotero asid she's impressed with Yu Li's determination.

"If she's got that much nerve to come to an unknown city she'll probably make it," Mrs. Lotero said.

Skiers on Vancouver Island, faced with the possibility of curtailing weekend trips to the Mainland because of increased ferry fares, won't get a fourth area on the Island this year . . . Crown Zellerbach and the developers are still negotiating the details on what promises to be an excellent group of facilities on 5,215-foot Mt. Washington near Forbidden Plateau . . . Indications are negotiations are nearly over, so it looks good for the winter of 1977-78 . . . Still, Mt. Arrowsmith, Green Mountain and Forbidden Plateau all offer a fair amount of variety.

Optimists Out Of Tournament

LAKE COWICHAN — Defending-champion Saanich Evening Optimists were eliminated from the British Columbia Babe Ruth (14 and 15-year-old) baseball championship tournament here Tuesday by dropping a 7-4 decision to North Vancouver.

Unbeaten West Kootenays handed Optimists their first loss in the eight-team, double-loss elimination affair 5-1 Monday.

Kootenays downed previously-unbeaten Coquitlam 5-2 in the other Tuesday game.

In other Monday games, Coquitlam downed Lake Cowichan 3-1 and Prince George edged the host club, 1-0. Lake Cowichan blanked Vancouver 4-0, Prince George defeated Port Alberni 7-4 and North Vancouver eased past Vancouver 6-5 in Sunday games while Victoria bounced Prince George 10-0, Coquitlam topped North Vancouver 11-5 and West Kootenays nudged Port Alberni 3-2 in opening tussles Saturday.

Action continues tonight with the final set for 2:30 p.m. (6:30, if necessary) Thursday.

Handicapped Olympics Hit

TORONTO (UPI) — The Olympics for the Handicapped opened Tuesday wracked by the same type of political and economic problems faced earlir by the Olympic Games at Montreal.

The 1976 Olympiad for the physically disabled opened desperately short of cash following cancellation of a $500,000 federal grant in protest over South African participation in the games for blind, amputee and wheelchair athletes.

And a spokesman said Jamaica had already left and a number of other countries were threatening Tuesday night to boycott the games if South Africa di dnot withdraw.

The Olympics at Montreal were also faced with a gigantic deficit and saw black nations withdraw from the games because of the presence of New Zealand, a nation with sport relations with South Africa.

The spokesman would not say which black countries were considering backing out because it was still hoped they would remain.

Representatives from some 48 nations were to participate in athletic events beginning today but this number could drop to 45 if other nations made good their pullout threat.

Lax Security Charged

COLLEGE PARK (UPI) — The leader of Russia's track and field delegation charged Tuesday "calculated actions" were taken against his country's contingent at the Olympics and Canadian security officials ignored them.

"When a crowd is gathered sometimes there are unprecedented and unforeseen actions by spectators, but these were calculated actions directed toward the team itself and against the general climate of the Olympics," said Nikolai Riashentsev.

"We are sure that if the rigid security had wanted to put an end to those actions they could have," he said.

As one example, Riashentsev pointed to Valeri Borzov, a star short distance runner who was unexpectedly scratched from the 200-metre event and later reported by the Canadian media to have defected.

"There was a highly acclaimed statement in the Canadian press that Borzov left the Soviet team and defected, when in fact he was sitting comfortably in his dorm and watching television," said Riashentsev, who arrived in College Park for the 14th United States-U.S.S.R. track and field competition.

Borzov said the report was completely erroneous. He said he gave an interview during the period he was supposedly "missing," but that everybody ignored it.

Borzov claimed a leg injury caused his scratch from the 200-metre event, but the leg is now sound. Borzov won two gold medals and a silver at Munich in 1972, but at Montreal won only an individual bronze and shared in a bronze for the 400-meter relay.

Riashentsev also cited cases involving the Soviet water polo team, the Soviet soccer team and a young Russian diver who defected as examples of harrassment.

"We are talking about the kidnapping of an underage boy sent to Montreal under the province of his coaches," he said of the defection of Sergei Nemtsanoy. "This was a well thought out, well placed provocative action."

He charged spectators threw bottles and shouted slogans at the Russians during a water polo match and, during a soccer match with East Germany, one Ukranian demonstrator danced on the field, but no action was taken.

Wanted: Attractive Events For Slightly Used Stadia

MONTREAL (AP) — The Games are over, the thousands of athletes and spectators are gone. Now Montreal must decide what to do with the Olympic facilities, which barely were ready for use in the recently-concluded, two-week spectacle.

Victor Goldbloom, the Quebec minister in charge of the Canadian Olympic Installations Board, says that work will continue in order to complete the $788 million Olympic Stadium and pool, the $85 million Olympic Village and the $62 million Velodrome.

"The Board may be in existence for another seven or eight years," Goldbloom says, "until the financial situation is cleared." The "financial situation" includes the $120 to $130 million still to be spent in construction through the next 18 months.

The baseball Expos and Canadian Football League Alouettes expect to use the Olympic Stadium for their games. The Alouettes had hoped to finish the current season in the 72,000-seat facility, which will have artificial turf installed to replace the natural grass used during the Olympics.

The stadium tower — complete with a retractable roof —will be built, but Goldbloom notes that it hasn't been decided whether to use concrete, as originally planned, or steel in the construction.

"It may take more than a year to get the tower completed," says Goldbloom.

The pool will become a municipal facility later this month. Fees similar to those charged for other city pools will be charged.

The Village is being converted into a housing complex. The OIB hopes to have the apartments available to occupants by October.

The Velodrome is ready for use and will host the Canadian cycling championships August 12-14.

An eight-man committee has been appointed to oversee the use of the Olympic Park. Maurice Custeau will be responsible for booking "attractive events" into the various sites.

None of those events can be as attractive as the Olympics but the Province of Quebec and the city of Montreal will try to fill the Olympic sites as often as possible to help cut into the huge deficit.

RUSSIANS PARTLY RIGHT

Sergei Lively and Happy

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI Sports Editor

NEW YORK (UPI) — For a change, the Russians are telling the truth.

Oly up to a point though.

After that, they're lying in their teeth about Sergei Nemtsanov, the 17-year-old Soviet diver who caused a much bigger splash out of the pool than in it by defecting in Montreal shortly before the Olympics ended.

Anatoly Kolesov, deputy chief of the Soviet Olympic delegation, says "we always knew Sergei as a lively, happy person."

Here the Russians are telling the truth because their affable teen-aged diver is so friendly, he was one of the most popular competitors in the Olympics.

He has an easy, relaxed way about him and isn't uptight at all among Americans as other Russian athletes are sometimes. The U.S. men and women divers all know young Nemtsanov. He competed in this country twice and being so outgoing, he made friends easily.

So when Soviet officials characterize him as lively and happy, they're telling the truth.

From that point on, though, the Russians' version of what happened to Nemtsanov in Montreal is composed of pure wholecloth, the fabric of which is so thick, you can almost feel it with your fingers.

What embarrasses the Russians so much is that Nemsanov, as an Olympian, is supposed to represent one of their model youngsters and with the glare of the world spotlight on him, what does he do but say in effect he'd much rather be in another country than the USSR.

That hurts.

The obvious question now becomes what can be done to counteract Nemtsanov's unthinkable transgression?

From the Soviets' point of view, the best thing that possibly could be done would be to pretend the whole thing never happened. Since that wasn't possible because the defection was immediately publicized by all the world's media, some other story had to be propagated.

The Russians went for an old one.

"It is our opinion that Nemtsanov has been psychologically brainwashed by highly trained specialists," proclaimed Anatoly Kolesov.

The Russians claimed their young diver was "kidnapped" by "gangsters."

The Canadians said this was a crock of cold borscht, absolute nonsence, which of course, it is.

If the Russians keep making up stores like this, they're never going to get to heaven that way. When's the last time you ever heard of Canada forcing anyone to stay in its country? The Canadians are among the most liberal people in the world. You like their country stay. You don't like it, go. Canada is so liberal minded it even offered refuge for U.S. draft dodgers and deserters during the Vietnam conflict.

Canada's Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau doesn't always win me over with all the things he says and does but I commend him wholeheartedly for his position with regard to returning Sergei Nemtsanov to the Soviets.

Trudeau says the teen-aged diver will not be turned over to the Russians and that he will be given six months' grace to decide whether or not he wishes to stay in Canada. Wisely, Trudeau says he would not want Nemtsanov to grow homesick in a few months and find out he burned all his bridges behind him.

"He's a super kid," one U.S. girl diver told me on the way to Dorval Airport outside Montreal. "We all know him and everybody likes him. He's full of life and he enjoyed being around the girls (during the Olympics), but he didn't spend all his time with any one particular chick. I don't believe he defected because of any one girl. He did it because he had a taste of this kind of life and he wants to see if he likes it. Is there anything wrong with that?"

Not at all.

Capilanos, Not Surrey Took Title

Vancouver Capilanos, not Surrey Sports, captured the B.C. senior baseball championship Monday at Lambrick Park.

The defending champions tripped Sports 11-6 in the championship final after the Surry club forced an extra game by collecting a 5-2 win earlier in the day.

It was erroneously reported as a victory for Surrey in Tuesday's Times.

Soccer Registration At Juan de Fuca

The Juan de Fuca Minor Soccer Association is calling for its annual registration of players. Boys between the ages of five to 17 years in the Juan de Fuca area will register Aug. 7-8 from 2 to 6 p.m. in the Curling Arena. Registration fee of $10 will be required and all players must bring their birth certificates.

KILLANIN TO DISCUSS GREECE OLYMPIC PLAN

ATHENS (UPI) — The International Olympic Committee will discuss Greece's proposal for the Olympic Games to return to their birthplace, the IOC president said in a letter made public Tuesday.

Lord Killanin said he would include "with future policy documentation so that it can be disussed" a letter from Premier Constantine Caramanlis suggesting the games in future be staged at their original site in Olympia to save them from politics and high finance.

Killanin said he appreciated the spirit in which Caramanlis' letter was written but he made it clear that he doubted there would be any changes in the IOC's long-term policy which allows countries to bid for the staging of the games. A spokesman explained that the Greek proposal was not meant to take the next games from the Soviet Union but rather was a far ranging plan.

Trudeau Rejects Soviet

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau Tuesday rejected Soviet charges defector Sergei Nemtsanov was kidnapped and brainwashed, saying the Russian athlete made the decision "of his own free will."

And External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen echoed this statement, adding the Soviet Union's demand for the immediate return of the Olympic defector "was quite unacceptable."

Trudeau also said at an impromptu press conference Nemtsanov was being given six months grace before deciding whether he wanted to remain here because "I would not want him to become homesick in a few months and find out he had burned all his bridges.

"We take the position he should be left free to choose whether he wants to remain in Canada or go back to the Soviet Union," Trudeau said.

Seahawks Trim 13 from List

SEATTLE (UPI) — The Seattle Seahawks trimmed 13 players from the active roster Tuesday, reducing the squad to the maximum of 60 plus three college all-star players who do not count against the Seahawk total.

Coach Jack Patera placed nine players on waivers, put two on the injured reserve list and two others on the reserve list.

Those placed on waivers included defensive tackle Wayne Baker, defensive end G. G. Galloway, running backs Andy Reid and Alan Dixon, cornerbacks Jerry Davis and Jarvis Blinks, offensive tackle Jay Douglas, tackle Greg McGuire and tight end-fullback Reggie Brown.

Linemen Bob Bos and John Neuman were placed on the reserve list and tight end Charles Waddel and fullback Larry Bates were placed on the injured reserve list.

The Seahawks also acquired James Ford, 210-pound running back, on waivers from the Houston Oilers. Ford played the last two years in the World Football League and before that played two seasons with New Orleans.

On Sunday, Del Williams and Kermit Johnson each scored touchdowns and Jim Plunkett passed for another as the San Francisco '49ers scored a 27-20 win over the Seahawks in the Kingdome.

Reserve quarterback Jim Zorn brought the 60,825 fans alive in the second half, passing for two touchdowns and running for another.

In other exhibition games, Los Angeles Rams topped the new Tampa Bay Buccaneers, 26-3; Pittsburgh Steelers dumped New Orleans 24-14; Baltimore trimmed Cleveland 21-0; Detroit edged Buffalo 20-17; St. Louis nipped the New York Jets 13-12; Miami trounced Minnesota 16-3; Oakland edged Dallas 17-14; Chicago nipped Denver 15-14; San Diego dumped Philadelphia 20-7 and New England dumped New York Giants 13-7 in overtime.

Long Pacts For Yank Pair

BALTIMORE (AP) — New York Yankees have announced that pitcher Ken Holtzman and third-baseman Craig Nettles have signed long-term contracts with the American League baseball team.

The announcement said only that Holtzman signed a five-year contract while Nettles agreed to terms for three years.

Nettles had complained during the weekend that the Yankees didn't seem interested in signing him.

Holtzman, a veteran lefthander, was traded from Oakland A's to Baltimore shortly before the season opened. He was unable to come to terms with the Orioles, who sent him to the Yankees just before the June 15 trading deadline as part of a 10-player deal.

Squire, Cook Stop Kubiceks

Mike Squire's ready bat and Rick Cook's steady arm paved the way to victory as Gorge Hotel blanked Kubicek's Home Service 2-0 in a Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game Tuesday night at Lambrick Park.

Squire got both Gorge runs. He scored first by drawing a two-out base-on-balls, stealing second and then racing home on a single by Russ Holmes.

The insurance run came in the sixth inning when Squire bashed out his fourth home run of the season. Squire is now tied for the legue lead in homers with Randy Price of Kubiceks.

Cook struck out 12 batters and yielded only three hits while boosting his season pitching record to 7-1.

Bryce Tops Kids' List

BARRIE, Ont. (CP) — If Grade 8 students were responsible for choosing Canada's government, Eugene Whelan would be prime minister, with Bryce Mackasey waiting in the wings.

As part of a social studies project, students of Steele Street public school here spent several weeks studying the federal cabinet and collecting newspaper clippings related to the ministries.

They wrote letters to the prime minister, 10 federal cabinet ministers, one opposition critic and one provincial cabinet minister questioning them on various points.

Four gave personal replies, the prime minister sent a form letter, some had assistants answer and others just sent press releases.

Agriculture Minister Whelan sent personal replies answering all questions. One letter took four pages and he referred to the students by their first names. Enclosures included photographs, biographies, pamphlets on metric conversion and a handbook on how Parliament operates.

But Mr. Whelan came out ahead of Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey only because of his longer letters.

Mr. Mackasey's letter was personal and included a biography, a booklet on the history of the post office, information on postal codes and a list of the postmasters-general since 1853.

Warren Allmand, solicitor-general, who also responded to the students personally, came next. But his releases weren't quite as nice, they said.

Allan McKinnon, expert on national defence for the Progressive Conservatives and the one opposition critic questioned, replied to his letter personally.

But most of the ministers had their staff answer the letters, including Thomas Wells, minister of education in Ontario.

An administrative assistant answered the letter written to Judd Buchanan, minister of Indian and northern affairs. The assistant said the minister was absent. She answered all questions and enclosed a booklet on how Parliament works and material on the James Bay agreement.

The office of the undersecretary of state for external affairs answered Allan MacEachen's letter. It did not answer the student's questions directly, but the office sent two brief press releases outlining the government's stand on the Angola situation.

Manpower and Immigration, headed by Robert Andras, forwarded an envelope full of printed statements including statistics and tables, statements from the minister, policy statements and programs.

A departmental assistant replied for John Munro, minister of labor, saying the minister could not answer the questions as they involved provincial matters. However, a copy of excerpts from the Canada Code was sent.

Marc Lalonde, minister of health and welfare, and Alastair Gillespie, minister of energy, mines and resources, had assistants answer their letters.

Students who wrote to James Richardson, minister of national defence, did not receive letters but were mailed a book and lengthy technical statements.

Teacher Ted Coldrey said the program helped students learn the functions of the government, to locate stories in newspapers and check for biased reports, to write a proper business letter and improved their public-speaking skills as a cabinet minister or opposition critic in a model parliament.

Bremer Turned Down 3 Times

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Three Sooke district elementary school principals Tuesday said they would not have recommended hiring Anne Bremer as a teacher.

The three — Herman Leung, now supervisor for intermediate education with the Sooke district, Cecil Gould, of Glen Lake school, and George Gurney of Sangster — all said they had dealings with Mrs. Bremer and gave various reasons why they felt she would not fit in their schools.

The three were testifying at the continuation of a discrimination complaint filed by Mrs. Bremer against schools superintendent Percy Pullinger, the Sooke school board and its trustees.

A three-man board of inquiry headed by Vancouver lawyer Rod Germaine is hearing the complaint, filed after Mrs. Bremer failed to get a job with the district in June, 1975.

Mrs. Bremer, 43, is the wife of former B.C. commissioner of education John Bremer, who was fired by the NDP government after premier Dave Barrett said on television he was a bit of a "flop."

Louis Lindholm, lawyer for the board and Pullinger, asked the three educators to give their reasons why they felt Mrs. Bremer was not a good candidate to teach a class of children with learning difficulties.

Leung said in his opinion Mrs. Bremer did not have the attributes of warmth, empathy and compassion necessary for the job, and he reported those feelings to Pullinger.

When pressed by David Lisson, lawyer for Mrs. Bremer and the Human Rights Branch to be more specific, Leung said it was just a "gut feeling" he had.

"I was asked (by Pullinger) for my opinion and gave it. It was out of my area," he said.

Gould, who took over from Leung as principal of Glen Lake school, which had the teacher vacancy, said he was "surprised" Mrs. Bremer had applied for the job and expressed "reservations" to Pullinger about hiring her.

He said in his dealings with Mrs. Bremer he did not think of her as a classroom teacher but saw her in more of a leadership role as a supervisor.

Goult said he felt she was "over-qualified" for the job, and agreed with Lindholm's suggestion that putting her in a school where the average age of the teaching staff was 23 years, "was like putting a round peg in a square hole."

Gould said her age and qualifications were two reasons why he had reservations about her.

Gurney said he would not recommend her for a job in Sangster school because of a "negative feeling by my staff at this time against Mrs. Bremer."

The negative feeling resulted from video film Mrs. Bremer made in 1974 in which there was some criticism of teaching facilities in the district regarding the use of clay for modeling.

He said there were some limitations in the use of clay, but named two schools in the district that had kilns.

The staff felt the criticism was unjustified and felt it was directed toward them, he said.

Gurney said he felt Mrs. Bremer's best role would be in dealing with older people. "I did not see Mrs. Bremer coming into our school as a good team member," he said.

The hearing continued today.

Lower Mainland Houseboaters Given a Year to Weigh Anchor

VANCOUVER (TNS) — Houseboat owners in the Lower Mainland have been given a year to weigh anchors.

Notice has gone to marina owners on the Fraser River that as of the end of July next year, "live-aboard" situations will no longer be tolerated.

The notice came from Ken McEwan, port manager of the North Fraser Harbors Commission, which leases the waterfront to the marina owners.

McEwan quoteda number of reasons for the move:

Lack of support facilities for the floating homeowners, such as sewage disposal, parking, laundry, and garbage facilities, limited recreation access, no fire protection, and the fact that the main group of houseboats — in the middle arm of the Fraser — is directly under the flight paths from Vancouver International Airport and the noise level there is unacceptable.

The houseboat owners reject all of the reasons.

Gary Worobec and his wife Dorothy live an a plush five-room floating home at the Richmond Marina.

"As far as the noise is concerned, there are no flights between 11 p.m. and 7 a.m.," Worobec said Tuesday. "The people they should be concerned about are people under the flight path during the day — kids in nearby schools and people working in the Richmond Industrial Park."

And he points out that the Airport Hyatt Hotel is directly in line with the marina, and thus subject to the takeoff and landing noise.

The owners concede that raw sewage is dumped from their homes, but, says Worobec, "compare that with farther up the river, where New Westminster dumps all its sewage raw."

And he points out that holding tanks now are mandatory for any new floating homes and that the marina is prepared to hook up to the Richmond municipal sewers.

On recreation facilities, Worobec says: "Why do you think we live here? We're boaters; this is where we get our recreation. It's our way of life."

The homeowners are hoping to meet with the Harbors Commission to discuss the problem.

Oilman Faces Murder Charges After Texas Shooting Spree

FORT WORTH, Tex. (UPI) — The bloodstained blonde in the long skirt and halter top ran from the plush 140-acre estate. She screamed a man was "killing everybody up at the house."

Police called to the mansion owned by millionaire oil executive Cullen Davis found the body of Davis' step-daughter, 12-year-old Andrea, slumped face down in the basement. She had been shot to death.

Former Texas Christian University basketball star Stan Farr, 30, was found shot to death in the kitchen.

Davis' estranged wife Priscilla, 35, who ran to a neighbor's house to get help, was wounded in the abdomen. The boyfriend of a family friend was found wounded in front of the house.

Davis was arrested a few hours later and charged with murder and attempted murder.

Davis, 40, was being held in Dallas county for "medical observation" in lieu of $80,000 bail. Five pistols were confiscated at the time of his arrest.

Officials said the Davises were involved in a stormy divorce suit and Monday had made another domestic relations court appearance in the two-year-old case.

Farr, a local tavern owner, Mrs. Davis and her daughter were living in the two-storey estate mansion at the time of the shooting. She had been separated from her husband for more than two years.

Homicide Capt. J. W. Tindall said police were first called to the estate by Beverly Bass, 18. Tindall said Miss Bass and her boyfriend, Gus "Bubba" Gravel, 21, had driven up to the mansion as a man emerged from the house carrying a black plastic bag.

She said her boyfriend recognized the man.

"What's happening? Where is everybody?" she said Gravel asked.

"Come and I'll show you," she said the man answered.

Miss Bass said the man pulled a gun, shot Gravel in the chest and chased her. She said she flagged down a passing motorist and called police at a drive-in food store.

While the man apparently was chasing Miss Bass, Mrs. Davis, who already had been shot, ran from the home to the residence of Clifford Jones, who called police.

The Creative Peach.

The Certo season is here. Time to create your own fresh-tasting jams, jellies and preserves with luscious, just-picked peaches and Certo* fruit pectin.

ANOTHER WAY TO SAY "I LOVE YOU" TO YOUR FAMILY.

Just watch those faces light up when your family tastes the fresh-picked flavour of jams, jellies and preserves you've made yourself.

Nothing tastes so good. Or so special.

GOOD EARTH PEACH JAM MADE WITH CERTO LIQUID.

Makes about 11 medium glasses.
4 cups prepared fruit (about 3 lb fully ripe peaches)
¼ cup lemon juice
7½ cups sugar
1 bottle Certo liquid fruit pectin.

First prepare the fruit—Peel, pit and grind or chop very fine about 3 pounds peaches. Measure 4 cups into a large saucepan. Stir in lemon juice.

Then make the jam—Thoroughly mix sugar into fruit. Place over high heat, bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and at once stir in Certo. Skim off foam with metal spoon. Then stir and skim for 5 minutes to cool slightly to prevent floating fruit. Ladle quickly into sterilized glasses. Cover at once with ⅛-inch hot paraffin.

GOOD EARTH PEACH JAM MADE WITH CERTO CRYSTALS.

Prepare fruit as above using a total of 4 cups prepared fruit. Stir in 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Measure 5½ cups sugar and set aside. Add 1 box Certo crystals to fruit in saucepan. Place over high heat and stir until mixture comes to a boil. Stir in sugar. Bring to a full rolling boil and boil hard 1 minute, stirring constantly. Remove from heat and continue as previously described. Makes about 8 medium glasses.

3 CREATIVE ADDITIONS.

Using one of the recipes above, have fun creating your own specialty-of-the-house jams with these variations:

1. Peach and Nut Jam—Prepare Peach Jam as directed, adding ½ cup chopped almonds and ½ teaspoon almond extract to prepared fruit.
2. Rosy Peach Jam—Prepare Peach Jam as directed, adding ½ cup chopped or slivered maraschino cherries to prepared fruit.
3. Peach Ginger Jam—Prepare Peach Jam as directed, adding 1 tablespoon chopped candied ginger to prepared fruit.

USE THE SHORT-BOIL OR FREEZER METHOD.

They both give you fresh-picked fruit flavour. So you choose.

ENJOY THAT JUST-PICKED FRESH FRUIT FLAVOUR YEAR 'ROUND.

Why stop here? You've just begun!

City Aldermen Slam B.C. Hydro For Planning Ugly Equipment

Victoria aldermen are again accusing B.C. Hydro of insensitivity with regard to equipment and fixtures which mar the urban landscape.

Previously, it was the crown corporation's gas division which drew the city's wrath over the attachment of ugly gas meters to building exteriors in the downfown area.

This time it's the electricity division under fire, over its proposal to build a 14-foot-by-nine-foot transformer kiosk at the approach to the Johnson Street Bridge.

The city's planning department had suggested a special structure to house the transformer. But in a letter submitted to the city's roads and underground services committee on Tuesday, Hydro distribution engineer F. B. Jones took exception to that idea.

He pointed out the modifications would increase the $5,000 expected cost of installation by about 50 per cent.

Another objection listed by Jones: "Painting the roof entails continuing maintenance, which will be costly and a source of adverse comment as the paint weathers."

After both Ald. Murray Glazier and Ald. Alf Hood dismissed Hydro's objections as invalid, the committee instructed chairman Ald. John Hayes and city engineer John Sansom to get together with Hydro officials and work out an acceptable solution.

Commenting on the claim the transformers are not "submersible," Hood said he fails to see "why the hell they can't bury these things."

If that adds to installation costs, he added, "that's fine: that's their problem, not ours."

Hood said he wants city representatives to find out why the power utility makes no effort to disguise unsightly transformers even in residential areas of the city.

As an example, he cited an "immense" above-ground transformer at the Rockland-Cook intersection.

"Damn it all, let them get the submersivle type," he grumbled.

Building Permits Climb 100% in Capital Region

Building permits issued in the Capital Regional District during the first half of 1976 totalled $19.8 million, up more than 100 per cent from $9.2 million in the first half of 1975.

These are permits issued in Sooke, Langford, Colwood, Metchosin and View Royal and the islands of Salt Spring, Pender, Saturna, Mayne and Galiano.

There were 584 permits issued during the six months, up from 284 in the corresponding 1975 period. Of the total, 332 were for single family homes, up from 242.

Main centres of activity were Sooke and Langford. Permits for 250 buildings were issued in Sooke worth $6.6 million while there were 116 permits in Langford worth $6.2 million.

There were 10 commercial or industrial permits issued in Langford, six in Colwood and four in Sooke.

Permits totalled $2.5 million in Colwood but only 22 of the 39 were for single family homes. By contrast there were 119 single homes in Sooke and 43 in Langford.

Among the islands, Salt Spring had as much construction as the other four combined. There were 84 permits issued for a total value of 2.9 million. Of this total, 69 were for single family homes and two were in the commercial-industrial category.

Saturna issued only one building permit during the six months. It was a single family home at the value of $18,950.

The regional district got $97,451.90 in revenues for processing the permits, up 100 per cent from $47,322.50 in the same period of 1975.

While the permit list was up strongly from 1975, the June total was only $2.7 million, down from $4.8 million the previous June. There were no permits issued in View Royal or Saturna during the month.

MOODY CHOWCHILLA SET FOR ABDUCTORS

CHOWCHILLA, Calif. (UPI) — A trio of young men suspected of abducting 26 of the town's children, who safely escaped from an underground prison, were returned to a moody Chowchilla today for an appearance at a heavily guarded courthouse.

All three want a reduction in their $1 million bail.

Last Thursday, when only 22-year-old Richard Schoenfeld was arraigned in a jammed courtroom, he only spoke two words, "Yes," when asked if he understood the 43 charges and "No," when asked if he wanted them repeated.

Today, Schoenfeld was joined in the Chowchilla justice court proceedings by his brother, James, 24, and Richard Newhall Woods, 24 who were captured 1,000 miles apart last Thursday.

About 250 townspeople jammed the tiny courthouse for Schoenfeld's first appearance, when his attorneys pleaded him innocent.

Most of Chowchilla's residents were simply curious over the trio who allegedly halted a school bus and abducted the driver and 26 children as they returned home from a swimming outing on July 15.

Extra patrols have since been ordered, by Madera County Sheriff Ed Bates.

The victims, aged 5 to 14, dug their way free from an underground prison at a Livermore, Calif., quarry the following night after being entombed 16 hours in what authorities believe was a $5 million ransom plot.

CRUD KEEPS FALLING ON HIS HEAD

SEATTLE (AP) — Orm Hamilton, 67, is tired of fish slop falling on his old bald head. After 12 years of enduring such indignity, he has written a poem about it.

"All tourists to the Pike Pace Market beware.

"Smelly old fish slop could drip in your hair

"Or splash all over your face or your duds—

"This stinky cascade of foul smelling crud . . ."

The retired landscape planner says the problem started 12 years ago when a drainpipe leading from one of the seafood shops in the market was damaged in an earthquake, "and it's been dripping and splashing cold, fishy water on me and on other people ever since.

"I've seen it hit beautiful ladies right on top of their heads and fancy hats," he continued. "I was hit three times in the last month, and with a head like this, you feel every miserable drop."

Hamilton says he gets his daily exercise walking up and down stairs which pass under the leaky drainpipe on the southern end of the market. He complained that his pleas to the market management have fallen on deaf ears.

"I write them letters. I go up there. I get the same story every time — the market's going to be renovated pretty soon, they say, so why spend a lot of money to repair the problem now?" he said.

Hamilton thinks the market should install a relatively cheap metal trough to catch the droppings.

Prisoner Wouldn't Pay Toll

BOSTON (UPI) — Never having been in a similar situation before, Chelsea patrolman Robert Hall was a little confused.

Hall was transporting a woman prisoner to the Massachusetts correctional institution at Framingham Monday when he ran into a little trouble — not with the prisoner, but with an adamant toll collector.

The patrolman pulled up to the Allston toll booth of the Massachusetts turnpike in his partol wagon, but discovered he didn't have the 30 cent toll — and that the collector was markedly unsympathetic.

He was told only firetrucks and ambulances on emergency runs could get on the road free and he would have to come up with the 30 cents or find another route.

"I didn't know what to do so I asked the woman if she had 30 cents," said Hall. "She said she wouldn't give it to me."

"I showed him the court papers and everything. He said 'This is a private road.' He was going to have me arrested," said the policeman.

Finally he was forced to take a longer alternate road.

"It's crazy," he said.

LONDON — May Parsons has been ordered to leave her pet boa constrictor, Basil, at home when she goes to work at a gas station.

Miss Parsons, 24, said she did not like leaving the four-foot snake at home in his glass tank because she thought he would be lonely. So she took him to work and kept him on her lap while she worked as a cashier at the station. Now the boss says Basil has to go.

BELLEVUE, Wash. — The "Sisko Kid" is being told to take his ice cream cart and ride on out of town. But even if he's been shot down once, the 18-year-old entrepreneur isn't giving up his fight.

"I can't believe it," said John Sisko, Jr., who played music from his cart to attract youthful buyers. But in Bellevue, peace and quiet reign supreme. Amplified music in the great outdoors is against the law.

Police told Sisko he could ring his bell, but not play his song. Business fell in half, Sisko told the city council, costing him $500 a week.

NARRAGANSETT, R.I. — Louie, a French student from Paris, flew home Tuesday after a four-week incognito vacation.

He toured Washington, spent five days at the Democratic National Convention as an observer and worked two weeks at a Providence bank.

Few people introduced to the handsome 18-year-old knew he was the son of French President Valery Giscard D'Estaing.

"I would have been considered a representative of the president and that was not at all what I wanted to do," he said Monday.

'WORKHORSE' $1 EYED FOR U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The treasury department thinks Americans would like a $1 coin that's bigger than a quarter but smaller than a 50-cent piece.

"People carry a lot of quarters in their pockets," said U.S. Mint spokesman James Parker Tuesday. "We think they might be inclined to carry a similar $1 coin if it was available. It, like the quarter, could become another workhorse coin."

A final decision is expected next month.

The idea came from the Research Triangle Institute, a North Carolina think tank. Parker said it found the present Eisenhower silver dollar "too heavy, too cumbersome."

Will the new $1 coin go the way of other novel but relatively unsuccessful ideas like $2 bills?

The deuce, discontinued more than 10 years ago because of "superstition," was resurrected on Thomas Jefferson's birthday this spring. But apparently Americans still don't like it.

"I think the $1 coin, if adopted, will be different," Parker said. "People will certainly have no excuse not to use it."

KING HUSSEIN SEES CRASH

SEATTLE (AP) — David A. Rahm of Bellingham, known as "The Flying Professor," was killed Tuesday when his biplane crashed in Amman, Jordan, while performing for King Hussein.

Rahm, 45, was a geology teacher at Western Washington State College. He was in Jordan as a guest of the king and was teaching at the University of Jordan.

Prisoners Moved

BERLIN (UPI) — West Berlin authorities Tuesday transferred three convicted women anarchists serving prison terms in West Berlin to jails in West Germany, the justice department said. A justice department spokesman said Baader - Meinhof terrorists Brigitte Asdonk, 28, Annerose Reiche, 29, and Vera Berzel, 23, were flown to Hamburg aboard a charter plane, from where they were carried to prisons in Luebeck and Frankfurt.

Shawnigan Concerts Continue

The international concert series being sponsored during August by Shawnigan Summer School of Arts, continues this week with two on-campus events at St. Michael's University School, Richmond, and a special on Sunday at McPherson Playhouse.

Thursday's event at the school will feature Gro Anderson on flute with William Aide assisting on piano; Roland Richard, baritone, accompanied by pianist Denise Masse, and the Stuttgart Piano Trio.

On Saturday the Orford String Quartet will be heard and pianist Robin McCabe, violinist Ruggiero Ricci and cellist Harvey Shapiro, the three latter being American artists.

IN NEW ORLEANS, IT'S MUFFULETTA

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — In a city famed for mouth-watering workingman's foods such as roast beef poor boy sandwiches and red beans and rice, the Creole-Italian muffuletta is a special feast.

Slices of provolone cheese, genoa salami and Italian ham topped with a freshly made, well seasoned olive salad and tucked between slices of the special muffuletta loaf — a 10-inch crusty disc sprinkled with sesame seeds — form a sandwich to feed two adults for about $2.40.

New Orleans is the only place to get a true muffuletta, although flimsy imitations have been reported in New York and Chicago. Forget Italy.

"You go to Italy and ask them to make a muffuletta and they don't know what you're talking about," said Frank Tusa, co-owner of the Central Grocery.

No one is quite sure who created the sandwich, although it is generally agreed it came into being about the turn of the century. The basis of the sandwich is the muffuletta loaf, which Tusa said probably cannot be duplicated anywhere else because the New Orleans water and humid climate were factors.

The Central Grocery, across the street from the French market, consistently is rated by local food writers as the best muffuletta shop in town. A sign out front identifies it as the "home of the original Muffuletta" despite Tusa's insistence the shop is a grocery first.

"We don't want to become a restaurant. Our first business is the grocery business," he said. "We've had so many people lined up for sandwiches they were getting in the way of our grocery customers."

The grocery, a favorite of gourmet shoppers and Cordon Bleu cooks, is a throwback to the turn of the century. Wooden cases with huge sliding glass doors house boxes of loose spaghetti and noodles. Shelves protruding from age-yellowed walls hold olive oil and artichoke hearts from Italy, octopus from Japan and mussels from Spain. Sacks of dry beans and huge wheels of cheese rest on the concrete floor.

Central supplied muffulettas to President de Gaulle of France and President Eisenhower. Orders regularly go out by plane to other parts of the country.

Salads mixed to taste from varied spread

Keep the Guests Busy Mixing Own Salads

Mary Moore

While father is barbecuing the steaks invite your guests to appease their hunger with a mixed tray of finger salad foods. Provide a good dip. Some of your extroverts will toss their own salads so have at hand a popular salad dressing.

TRAY FULL OF DIPPABLES

Tiny snow-white cauliflowerets, Spanish onion rings, green pepper rings, tomato wedges or cherry tomatoes, radish roses, tiny broccoli tops, carrot curls, celery sticks.

CREAMY DIP

One package dry onion soup mix, 2 cups dairy sour cream, 2 tablespoons capers (optional), 2 teaspoons chopped chives or green onion or green onion flakes, few drops Tabasco. Gently combine all ingredients. Chill. Makes about 2 cups dip.

SALAD GREENS FOR TOSSING YOUR OWN

Washed and dried small spinach leaves, torn Bibb lettuce, chunked Iceberg lettuce, parsley sprigs, coarsely chopped chives, sliced green pepper, finely sliced celery hearts. Some of my French friends include very young frenched green beans and snow peas. Anyway this gives you plenty of variety to choose from.

HERB AND GARLIC DRESSING (Popular)

Mix together in a jar with a tight-fitting lid:

½ cup oil
2 Tbsp white vinegar
2 tsp sugar
½ tsp salt
¼ tsp finely chopped parsley
¼ tsp garlic salt (or very finely chopped clove of garlic)
¼ tsp basil
¼ tsp celery seed (optional)
¼ tsp marjoram
¼ tsp white pepper.

Shake well each time before using.

GRILLED PICKLED CHOPS

(makes 6 servings)

¾ cup beer
½ cup chopped dill pickle
One-third cup dill pickle liquid
2 tablespoons salad oil
1 garlic clove, crushed
1 teaspoon poultry seasoning
1 teaspoon dry mustard
Salt
6 loin pork chops, cut each about ¾ to 1-inch thick
1 cup sour cream
1 teaspoon prepared horseradish
¼ cup chopped, canned pimiento

In large, shallow dish, combine beer, dill pickle, pickle liquid, salad oil, garlic, poultry seasoning, mustard and 1 teaspoon salt. Add pork chops and turn to coat well. Cover and chill; marinate at least 2 hours or overnight, turning occasionally.

Remove chops from marinade. Strain off chopped pickles; reserve. Place on grill over medium hot coals about 5 inches from heat source. Grill, brushing frequently with marinade, 25 to 30 minutes or until done, turning once. Meanwhile, in small bowl, combine sour cream, horseradish, pimiento and ¾ teaspoon salt; stir in chopped pickles from marinade. Serve sour cream sauce with pork chops.

Although there is probably no one dish which can be described as typical for the whole of Canada, each province enjoys regional specialities and each has some homemakers with sufficient ingenuity to conjure up novel dishes.

The 24-page booklet Selected Recipes features dishes from every Canadian province and indicates which homemaker has contributed each one.

Some of the unusual main dishes include Weiners Chinese Style from Manitoba, Stuffed Bologna Rolls from Nova Scotia, and Ham and Teriyaki Sauce from British Columbia.

From Prince Edward Island comes a recipe for Macaroni and Bacon a la King and from Ontario, 'Roast Turkey with Apricot stuffing.

Report Lists Sodium Content

LOMBARD, Ill. (AP) — Sodium, a prime ingredient of ordinary table salt, worries some people who think they're getting too much of it in their diet, says a report published by the Water Quality Association, which offers reassurance on this point.

"Sodium is essential in human nutrition," the report says.

"A person in normal health will excrete any excess of it.

For those who must restrict sodium for medical reasons or are merely concerned, the report lists the sodium content of nearly 200 foods, beverages, and common non-prescription remedies. A slice of white bread, for example, contains 129 milligrams of sodium, a frankfurter 610 and two antacid tablets 1,064.

Though water, even when softened, is a minor source of sodium, the report lists the sodium content of water in the 100 largest U.S. cities. Long Beach, Calif., tops them all with just over 29 milligrams in an eight-ounce glass. Seattle is at the bottom with only a fraction of a milligram."

A typical normal adult takes in 4,500 milligrams of sodium a day—about one-eighth of an ounce.

Sun-Warm Berries Best

hilda beastall

By HILDA BEASTALL

The local berry fruits now available from gardens, roadside stands and markets are so delicious that it is difficult to have a favorite. They are all good; each has its distinctive flavor. That of strawberry does not resemble raspberry, nor does raspberry taste like loganberry, and blackberry certainly has a flavor different to any of these.

Berries are perishable and the season of each so short that the least possible time should elapse between picking the fully ripe fruit and the eating.

For perfection of flavor and highest nutrition, the berries are picked and eaten within minutes while still sun-warm, for only then is their natural sugar content high enough to make additional sugar unneeded. An hour or so later some of the berries will have passed beyond the prime stage and a bowlful will then be less than perfect. Freshly picked, with homemade yogurt on top, you have a complete light meal for a summer's day.

However much we may like the fresh raw berries and use them that way for the highest vitamin and mineral contribution to our meals, homemakers naturally want to use them sohetimes in other ways.

When only a few are available, a Berry Sauce spreads their flavor over homemade wheat germ muffins or a square of any kind of good plain homemade cake or a fancy yeast bread. Or use the sauce on a bowlful of homemade granola-type cereal for an instant snack.

Berry Sauce

2 cups berries
½ cup water
¼ cup sugar
2 Tbsp cornstarch.

Boil berries and water together in a pan for 5 minutes after boiling point reached.

Strain over a bowl, pressing the pulp through a wire strainer to remove seeds. (If seeds are no problem to any family member, omit this straining.).

Put the strained juice and pulp back into the saucepan; bring again to boiling point.

Mix sugar and cornstarch in a cup, and add slowly to boiling pulp. Stir constantly with wooden spoon until thickened and clear. Then simmer gently, still stirring, for one minute.

This Berry Sauce willl keep in covered glass jar for two days in refrigerator to be used warm or cold as suited to the dessert of the day.

Berry Muffins are another way to use the various berries; larger berries such as logans should be cut in half with a sharp knife bnecause of their size. They can be used whole for the Berry Crisp recipe which follows the Berry Muffins.

Berry Muffins

1 cup unbleached flour
1 cup wholewheat flour
2 Tbsp wheat germ
¼ cup sugar
1½ tsp baking powder
½ tsp salt
2 small eggs
¾ cup milk from skim powder
3 Tbsp soft margarine
1½ cups (approx.) berries.

Measure dry ingredients into mixing bowl, and mix well.

In small bowl, cream margarine until very soft; add eggs and milk; mix well.

Add this liquid mixture all at once to dry mixture, stir until just blended but still lumpy. Add berries and combine with two or three strokes of spoon.

Spoon at once into greased muffin pans.

Bake in fairly hot oven 209 deg. C. for about 20 minutes until lightly browned. Makes about 14 muffins. These can be served warm with the Berry Sauce or with plain homemade yogurt.

Berry Crisp Dessert

3 cups sliced apples
2 cups rasperries (or others)
¼ cup sugar
1 Tbsp fresh angelica leaf
1 cup unbleached flour
2 Tbsp wheat germ
Few grains salt
2 Tbsp sugar
One-third cup soft margarine.

Grease a 6x10x2-inch baking dish (or similar size). Spread thinly sliced apples over bottom.

Mix berries with sugar and finely-cut angelica leaf (to reduce tartness of fruit when cooked), and spread over apples.

Combine remaining ingredients, cutting in margarine until mixture is crumbly. Sprinkle over fruit. Pat down a little.

Bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C. for about 45 minutes.

Serve warm with homemade yogurt or the Berry Sauce.

Makes 6 generous servings or 8 regular.

Several variations of summer berries with other fruits can be used in these recipes. In winter frozen berries will taste almost as good and will bring back the aroma of sun-warmed berries.

Curry's Subtle Flavor Needn't Be a Scorcher

By TINY BENNETT

It is quite a problem to know what to do with those small amounts of raw meat often left in the preparation of a main entree. The answer of course is to save them up and use them to make curry.

In our present situation of ever-rising food costs, this is a form of economy well worth practising and it makes for an exciting adventure in both cooking and home dining.

Once one has grasped the basics of cooking curry, one can use just about any ingredients and come up with delicious food. However it is good practise to try to stick to the traditional.

Recently, on a day when I'd botched everything I did all day, I finished up with only two hours to go before dinner. The baby rack of lamb I'd planned to cook was still in the freezer.

Happily I had a small pack of raw lamb in the fridge, so decided to go all Pakistani with curried meat and cauliflower (Gobi Gosht), rice, salad and bananas in chilled plain yogurt. This gave me 1½ hours cooking time, including 15 minutes of preparation, for a per person cost of serving of close to 90 cents. Gobi Gosht can be cooked using inexpensive beef but then calls for longer cooking to tenderize the meat.

GOBI GOSHT

(Note: All spice measures are in teaspoons.)

Cut 1½ pounds raw lamb into cubes; mince and mix two onions, two garlic cloves and one teaspoon ground ginger; blend together one tespoon each of turmeric, chili and curry powder and ground coriander; cut two tomatoes into quarters and clean up a head of cauliflower into small flowerettes.

Heat one tablespoon butter or margarine in a heavy pot together with three tablespoons cooking oil and when the mix sizzles, stir in the mixed spices, reduce the heat and fry to blend together all the very subtle flavors.

This gentle frying of the spices is one of the secrets of turning out a good curry.

Add the onion-garlic-ginger combination and the tomatoes and, mixing gently, fry on medium heat until all is evenly colored and the oil begins to separate, then put in the meat, mix and fry for five minutes. Beat lightly two tablespoons plain yogurt, and, mix and sprinkling with a little salt simmer for 25-30 minutes.

Finally put in the cauliflower sprigs, mix and cover to cook on moderate simmering heat, until the meat is fork tender, then serve on a bed of tumeric rice.

TUMERIC RICE:

Tumeric is a deep yellow spice in powder form that has a mild and pleasantly pungent flavor that can really improve a dish of plain boiled rice. It also makes it look far more attractive. I have used it ever since saffron prices soared beyond my reach.

To get the best possible flavor from your rice, use beef or chicken stock or water with two chicken or beef cubes dissolved thoroughly in the boiling liquid.

Into a heavy pot, bring two cups stock or water to a rolling boil and carefully add one cup of long-grained rice, sprinkling a little in at a time so the pot doesn't go off the boil. Stir well, clap on the lid and turn the heat right down.

After 30 minutes the rice will have cooked in the generated steam, will have absorbed the stock and will be dryish, light and fluffy. Turn out onto a serving dish, make a big hole in the centre, fill this with the curry and serve.

Simply slice two bananas into a bowl, dust lightly with tumeric, curry powder and a little powdered ginger, mix to blend, cover with plain yogurt, mix gently and chillm then serve as a side dish with the meal.

I have made this meal quite bland because that's the way it is eaten in Pakistan, and they are right too, because medium-heat curry brings out the full flavor of the ingredients.

BLUEBERRY NOG

For each 8 oz. serving, blend in blender, one egg, ¾ cup of cold milk, ¼ cup of blueberries (fresh or dry-pack frozen), one tablespoon of honey or corn syrup.

$595 machine turns out 240 crepes an hour

Crepes: The Latest Fad To Sweep the Table

By MIMI SHERATON
N.Y. Times

If you don't know that crepes are the latest food fad, it's only because you haven't been looking. Restaurants with menus based entirely on thse thin French pancakes are proliferating and being franchised around the country. Cookware departments are adrift with crepe pans ranging in price from $5 to $595, many of them merely ordianry skillets renamed to cash in on the new wave of popularity.

Crepe cookbooks and easy-to-use mixes are beginning to come to market. At a recent party introducing an electric crepe maker made by Contempra Industries, Walter Nachtigal, the company's executive vice president dubbed his product "an entertainment device," and predicted there would be one million electric crepe pans sold in this country during the second half of this year, and between 5 and 10 million next year.

Usurping and far outdistancing the erstwhile rage for quiches, crepes have much the same appeal. Both are relatively inexpensive "holders" that dress up even the plainest (and, all too often, the most inferior) ingredients. What's more, both are FRENCH and so must be fancy. Crepes are less expensive to make than the quiche pastry shell, and are less fragile. They can be frozen and so kept on hand to be filled at the last minute, and they are versatile enough to make appetizers, entrees or desserts.

At their best, crepes are made from scratch with eggs, flour, milk and some other liquid that is usually water, but which may also be meat stock or wine, depending on the final use. Some form of fat is needed for smoothness and tenderness. Though many recipes call for vegetable oil both in the batter and to grease the pan, melted butter imparts a far better flavor. Salt, white pepper and a grating of fresh mutmeg are desirable additions, unless, of course, the crepes are to be dessert, in which case a little sugar is all that is needed, though other suitable seasonings can be included.

The most satisfactory crepe recipe I have found is as follows:

4 eggs
1 cup milk
¾ cup water
1¾ cup sifted flour
1¼ teaspoons salt
1¼ tablespoons melted butter
Dash each of white pepper and nutmeg

1. Combine eggs, milk, water, flour and salt, and mix, eithr in a blender or with a rotary mixer. If using a blender, scrape down sides of jar after a minute or two and blend for another two minutes or until all flour disappears. Add whatever flavorings you like. Strain into a bowl and let stand in the refrigerator for two hours so flour absorbs as much liquid as possible.

2. Heat a crepe pan and brush it with clarified butter. For each crepe, pour in ¼ cup batter, tipping and rotating pan as you do so until bottom is evenly coated. In two to three minutes the frost side should be golden brown. Flip or turn with a spatula and brown the second side.

The temperature of the pan is an important factor in this regard. If it is too hot, the batter will sizzle and form ripples the second it hits the pan, resulting in unsatisfactory crepes. If the pan is too cool, the batter slips around without taking shape, but will eventually cood as the pan heats, although the end result will be tough.

If crepes have earned a reputation for being difficult to make, it is because of the tipping and rotating motion that must be done the instant the batter hits the pan, before it has set. But that technique is not really difficult to master, and once learned, is rarely lost. It's a good idea to practice when you do not have to serve the crepes to guests. One batch of batter should be all that's needed to enable you to master the skill.

Because the uninitiated are seared off by this motion, the inverted pan has become popular, requiring only that it be dipped into batter, then turned upright and cooked.

But at the press party introducing the new Contempra pan, not one of a dozen or so food editors and writers trying the pan for the first time succeeded. All needed at least three attempts to get the knack.

At $595 a throw, the Magicrepe by Seb of France turns out 240 crepes an hour, if you know what to do with that many. The process is almost fully automatic. A dispensing bottle is filled with batter, then inverted over a feeding tray. At the flick of a switch, a roller with two crepe-size dies picks up the batter, cooks it and ejects it. For well-stacked crepes, you will need an accompanying automatic stacker that costs an additional $350.

Sunbeam's M'sieur Crepe proved to be the most satisfactory of the electric crepe makers, for while it does use the inverted pan method and is Teflon coated, it produced crepes with a texture close to those made in a conventional pan and it was possible to turn them, browning the second side slightly if unevenly. When turned over, ths same pan can be used for frying.

Popeye's Spinach Just a Fraud?

By Ruth Fremes and Zak Sabry

For years we watched Popeye get himself cornered by villains, caught in the worst kind of jams, reach for a can of spinach and suddenly have the strength to triumph. He convinced us of the great good of spinach, showed us how important iron was to our bodies and gave us a handy way to convince our children to eat their spinach.

Popeye probably worked with the kids. And he was right about our need for iron. Our bodies use iron to form hemoglobin, and a number of similar compounds, in our blood and cells. These iron compounds carry the oxygen, that is essential for our bodies to get energy from the foods we eat, from our lungs through evey cell in the body. If you don't have enough iron in your body, you will feel the lack of it. You'll become weak and anemic, tire quickly and easily — in spite of how much sleep you're getting.

When the Nutrition Canada study was done, the researchers found that most Canadians don't consume enough iron in their regular diet. Many of us aren't eating enough foods that are rich in iron. The study also showed that many children and adult women don't have the reserves of iron in their bodies that they should have. That makes getting iron in your diet even more important.

The trouble is that, while Popeye was right about iron, he was wrong about spinach. Spinach IS rich in iron: one cup of cooked spinach contains 4 milliagrams of iron, which is about half a child's daily requirement of iron, and about a third of the iron a teenager or adult woman needs each day. But, for your body to use the iron you eat, the iron must be in a form that is easy to digest. That just isn't the case with the iron in spinach: that iron is in a form that your body doesn't use efficiently. Your body can't break down the iron in the process of digestion, so it excretes it, and while you're feeling noble about having eaten all that spinach, you may still be neglecting your body's iron needs.

Your iron supply must come from somewhere else. You have lots of choices: liver is the best source of iron, and many other minerals and vitamins; meat and kidney are also rich in the kind of iron your body can use. Or, try legumes such as beans, peas, lentils and peanuts. They contain significant amounts of iron. Whole wheat bread contains certain amounts of iron naturally, while white bread is enriched with iron.

Refined breakfast cereals usually have iron added to them. Check the labels on the cereal. Iron can be added to cereals in three forms: as reduced iron, as ferrous sulphate and as iron pyrophosphate. Iron pyrophosphate is a bit like the iron in spinach — it's not easily used by your body. So buy the cereals with iron in the reduced or ferrous sulphate forms. Right now, our Health Branch in considering allowing food producers and processors to use only reduced iron to enrich their products. Until that happens, depend on the labels on the food you buy to be sure you're getting usable iron in your food.

While we may have dispelled the myth about spinach and iron, don't stop eating that spinach, or you'll be giving up a good source of other nutrients, such as Vitamin A and folic acid. (Folic acid is one of the B-Vitamins that the Nutrition Canada survey found to be deficient in the diets of many Canadians.) And don't limit spinach to being just a cooked vegetable. Try it in a casserole with fish or chicken. Or make a fresh spinach salad vinaigrette, with canned tuna, fresh sliced mushrooms, sliced red onion and canned pimento as a main course meal.

Spinach may not give you the strength or charm of Popeye, but it is a valuable, nutritious food that should be part of your diet.

Dr. Z. I. Sabry is a Professor of Nutrition at the University of Guelph. Ruth Fremes is a nationally known Home Economist and consumer broadcaster.

Thirst Can Be Hazard

your health

By LESTER COLEMAN, M.D.

Is it unusual for a four-year-old child to be constantly thirsty? My daughter is perfectly well, but she drinks great quantities of water and juices. — Mrs. A.M.

Dear Mrs. M.:

Excessive thirst is known as "polydipsia."

Because of this unquenchable thirst, children or adults become compulsive water drinkers and consume enormous quantities of fluids.

Despite the fact that your daughter seems to be in good health, the reasons for this condition should be very carefully studied. I do not mean in any way to create a sense of fear in you, but I must suggest that a special type of diabetes, or some kidney problem, may be responsible.

Rather, I want to encourage you to find an explanation for your child's behavior long before the problem (if one exists) becomes complicated.

Are bunion operations successful? I am perfectly miserable when I walk, even with specially constructed shoes. Mrs. E.B.T.

Dear Mrs. T.:

A bunion is a swelling and inflammation of the great toe. A bursa, or sac, is normally present at this site. This becomes thickened and painful due to the constant pressure of a tight shoe.

There are also some malformations of the structure of the foot which, too, can produce this painful condition.

Before surgery is planned, special studies are made of the total foot structure in order to determine the nature and the extent of the operation that will effect a complete cure. Then, when surgery is performed, the results are gratifying.

Far too many people delay for years a complete evaluation of the cause of their bunion. They suffer unnecessarily for long periods of time and, by neglect, sometimes make surgery more difficult.

When I pick up a pen to write a letter my hand shakes. As you can see, I can hardly finish this letter. This only happens when I try to write. Can you explain this? — Mr. B.D.

Dear Mr. D.:

There are many causes of tremors. The kind that you describe is known as an "intention" tremor that starts when you make a purposeful movement like writing. One cannot speculate about the causes of a tremor. A complete neurological examination is essential. There are now many new drugs that can control some types of tremor.

Oriental Dinner B.C. Style

2 tbsp oil
2 cups beef (or poultry breasts) cut in ¼" julienne strips meat tenderizer (for less expensive beef cuts — chuck, shoulder)
2 cups turnips cut in ¼" julienne strips
2 cups celery cut on the bias
1 large onion cut into ¼" slices, separated into rings
2 cups carrots, cut on the bias ¼" thick
1 beef bouillon cube
½ cup hot vegetable water
1½ tsp cornstarch
¼ cup vegetable water, cooled
1 tbsp soy sauce
1 tsp ground ginger (optional)

In skillet or wok, heat oil to almost smoking. Cut beef into strips; sprinkle inexpensive cuts of beef with tenderizer according to manufacturer's directions. Stir-fry meat until almost cooked. Remove to warm platter. Keep warm, large kettle or dutch oven, heat 10 to 12 cups of salted water to boiling point.

Blanch turnips, celery, onion and carrots for 2 to 4 minutes (depending on age and size of vegetables) or until almost tender. Remove vegetables with sieve or slotted spoon (save vegetable water); shake well to remove moisture. Add a little more oil to drippings in pan if necessary. Stir-fry vegetables until each vegetable is lightly coated with drippings (color of vegetables is vibrant).

In a small bowl dissolve beef boulion cube in one half cup of hot vegetable water. Add to vegetables in skillet; mix well. Sprinkle meat with ginger if desired. Return meat to skillet toss with vegetables. Cover; steam 4 to 5 minutes or until vegetables are tender crisp. Mix cornstarch with cooled vegetable water; add soy sauce.

When vegetables are cooked, stir cornstarch mixture into meat-vegetable mixture; stir until liquid is thickened and sauce is bubbly. Correct seasoning by adding more soy sauce if desired. Serve with bowls of hot steaming rice and extra soy sauce. Makes four to six large servings.

Jellied Salads Fill Bill As Cool Summer Dish

By Lynn and Joel Rapp

Dear Lynn and Joel:

Would you please tell me what is wrong with my Fuchsia plant? It wilted and the leaves fell off. Many thanks L.S.

Dear L.S.:

An entire book could be written on the care and feeding of Fuchsias. This popular, showy-flowered plant comes in hundreds of named varieties and is best grown as a summer annual or in greenhouses. Fuchsias bloom from early summer to first frost, and at least 500 varieties grow in the West. Fuchsias do best in cool summer temperatures, modified sunlight and with much moisture in the atmosphere and soil. If you live where fog rolls in on summer afternoons, any place in your garden or home will provide these conditions. Where summers are warm, windy, dry or sunny, seek a favorable exposure protected from wind or all-day dappled shade — in short, a place where you would be comfortable on summer afternoons.

Soil mix should be porous and fast-draining but water-retaining. Water as often as you can as it's almost impossible to overwater Fuchsias. Apply a complete fertilizer frequently — every 10 days or so. Fuchsias everywhere need some pruning in early spring, and if you can manage to follow all these instructions, you might find yourself among the lucky people who won't have to sing that sad old dirge, "My Fuchsia Just Passed."

Summer hostesses don't ask for much — they just look for magic dishes that require no cooking, and that are quick, easy, attractive, cool, economical and nutritious.

Whether they're served as a main dish, as an accompaniment to the meal, or as a dessert, jellied salads containing fresh fruits and vegetables are guaranteed to fill the bill and still keep their cool!

Jellied salads are made with eiter plain or flavored gelatin. The plain is used when other ingredients provide the flavor, such as tomato juice in tomato aspic. It's usually soaked in cold liquid to soften, then dissolved by heating or adding hot liquid.

Flavored jelly powders, both sweet and savory, impart their own distinctive flavor. They may be dissolved in hot water immediately. Try using a lemon base with a fish salad, apple with pork or peach with chicken.

Salads made in tin, aluminum or copper moulds are easier to unmold than those made in glass or ovenware. Before filling molds, brush the inside very lightly with oil to facilitate unmolding.

Following are a few hints that could help when unmolding a jellied salad:

— Wet surface of serving plate with cold water to make the salad easier to slide into position after unmolding.

— Run tip of knife around inside edge of mold to loosen jelly.

— Dip mold into bowl of hot (not boiling) water for 1 or 2 seconds.

— Wipe mold, tilt slightly to allow air to get under one side of jelly, helping to release it.

— Place serving plate upside down on mold and invert together.

CUCUMBER CREAM JELLIED SALAD

1 cup boiling water
¾ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons vinegar
1 teaspoon finely chopped dry chives
1¼ cups (½ pint) dairy sour cream
¼ cup salad dressing or mayonnaise
1¾ cups finely diced, peeled cucumber

Dissolve jelly powder in water. Add salt, vinegar and chives. Chill until partially set. Fold in remaining ingredients. Turn into mold and chill until firm (about 3 hours). Unmold. If desired serve on lettuce and garnish with radish slices. Six servings.

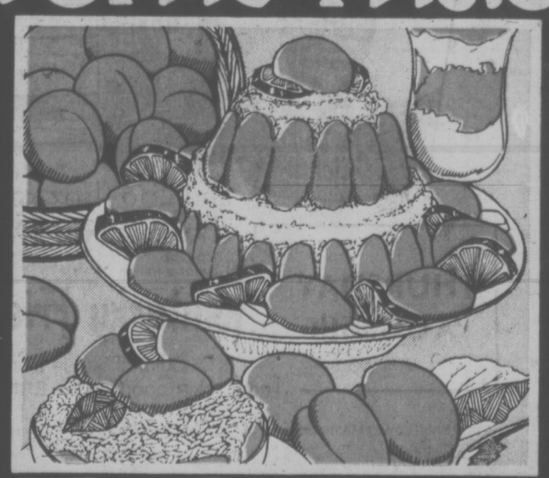
YOU CAN'T BEAT Home-made GOOD



It's B.C. Apricot time. Time to enjoy the zesty, full flavour of B.C. Apricots in summery salads . . . pies . . . parfaits . . . shortcakes . . . on breakfast cereal . . . and as fresh fruit snacks. Apricots are one of the easiest and most popular fruits to preserve, and right now is the time to do your home-canning. Just think of the economy, convenience and tasty goodness of sunny apricots all next winter—if you have a good supply of preserves and jams.

B.C. APRICOTS

FREEZER APRICOT JAM

3 cups mashed apricots
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1/8 teaspoon grated lemon rind
5 cups granulated sugar
Half bottle liquid Certo

Mix apricots, lemon juice, and rind. Add sugar; stir 5 minutes until sugar dissolves. Let stand 20 minutes. Stir in pectin. Ladle into cartons or jars, filling to within 1/2 inch of top. Cover with cloth and let stand until set, 24 hours or overnight. Cover and freeze. To serve, thaw and store in refrigerator. (Freeze for 1 month before thawing to use.)

APRICOT SOUFFLÉ

1 quart (12-20) home-canned apricots
3 tablespoons margarine
3 tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
Salt
4 eggs, separated
Icing sugar

Drain apricots, reserving syrup. Strain apricots through a sieve; add syrup to make 1-1/4 cups. Melt margarine; blend in flour; add apricot pulp; cook slowly until thickened. Remove from heat; stir in sugar, lemon juice, and dash of salt. Beat egg yolks well; add to apricot mixture slowly, stirring. Beat egg whites until stiff; fold into batter. Pour into buttered 1-1/2-quart soufflé dish. Bake at 375 degrees F. for 25 minutes. Sprinkle with icing sugar. Serve garnished with home-canned apricot halves. Serves 4.

APRICOT CHUTNEY

3 lbs. apricots
1 large onion
1 1/2 cups chopped celery
1 oz. preserved ginger
1 tablespoon mixed pickling spice
1 lb. green apples
2 cups sugar
2 teaspoons salt
2 cups vinegar

Cut apricots and onions into small pieces. Chop ginger fine. Tie spices in a cheesecloth bag. Peel and chop apples. Combine all ingredients in a large saucepan.

Place over low heat, cook slowly stirring often, until chutney is of good consistency, about 2 to 2-1/2 hours. Turn into hot sterilized jars, seal firmly tight.

APRICOT WINE SALAD

1 pint home-canned apricots
1/2 cup port wine
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 inches stick cinnamon
6 whole cloves
1 large, fresh pear, pared and cut in eighths.
1 large banana, peeled and sliced

Drain apricots, reserving syrup. In saucepan, combine 1/2 cup of reserved syrup (use remainder for a jelly or fruit sauce), wine, lemon juice, and spices tied in a cheesecloth bag. Simmer 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Remove from heat; cool slightly. In bowl, combine apricot halves and eighths of pear; pour syrup over; mix lightly; cover; refrigerate several hours or overnight. Stir occasionally. Discard spice bag; add banana; mix. Drain fruits; serve on your favourite salad greens, garnished with cherries. Serves 6

PRIZE APRICOT JAM

8 cups quartered apricots (about 3 pounds)
4 1/2 cups granulated sugar
3/4 cup brown sugar
1 orange
1 cup crushed pineapple
1/8 teaspoon salt

Place apricots, sugars, coarsely shredded rind and juice of orange, pineapple, and salt in heavy kettle. Bring to boil, stirring until sugar is dissolved. Cook rapidly, stirring often, until two thick drops of syrup will run together off side of cold metal spoon (about 30-35 minutes). Ladle into hot sterilized jars. Makes about 8 medium glasses.

SPICED PICKLED APRICOTS

6 pounds firm, small apricots
1 tablespoon whole cloves
1 tablespoon whole allspice
1 - 2 inch stick cinnamon
1/8 teaspoon celery seed
1 tablespoon mustard seed
6 cups granulated sugar
2 cups cider vinegar

Wash apricots. Tie spices, except mustard seed, in cheesecloth bag. Combine sugar, vinegar, spice bag, and mustard seed in large kettle. Bring to boil. To this add 10 apricots at a time; cook gently until tender (about 3 minutes). Remove fruit carefully and place in hot sterilized pint jars. When fruit is finished, use remaining syrup to cover it in jars. Seal at once. Makes 6 pints.

CLINICALLY DEAD BABY CHUCKLING

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — A premature baby born clinically dead has survived to become a normal, healthy child strong enough to go home with her parents, the baby's doctor said on the weekend.

'I've had so many people tell us to give up," said Dr. Ann Rogers, a pediatrician. "Everyone was watching in a daze when they came to pick her up. They couldn't believe it. I couldn't believe it."

The baby, Pepper Tamika Root, was born 4½ months premature April 27. She weighed only one pound, six ounces and measured 13½ inches. Pepper has since gained three pounds and is 18 inches long.

Rogers said the baby was clinically dead at birth — it had no heart beat, wasn't breathing and had no muscle tone or reflexes.

Cassette Movies Planned for TV

NEW YORK (UPI) — Paramount Pictures and Sony Corp. of America have combined on a venture to provide motion pictures on cassettes that can be shown on home videotape equipment.

The costs and methods of distribution have not been worked out yet but spokesmen for the companies said at a news conference Tuesday they hope to have a package available in late 1977.

"We have the same objective — to get into the home with equipment and with prime craftware" such as new movies, educational programs and specials, said Paramount chairman Barry Diller, describing the company, Sony-Paramount Home Entertainment Centre.

"This one system will be able to do everything — both record and playback what the viewer wants," said Harvey L. Schein, president of the American subsidiary of the giant Japanese electronics maker.

The system is based on Sony's Betamax units which can record television programs even when the viewer is watching another channel or is not at home. To supplement the home-recorded programs, the joint company will provide Paramount films and possibly those of other movie makers in cassettes on a purchase or rental basis.

Officials said the package should be on the market by late 1977.

Paramount and Sony each will own half the new company. Diller and Schein said they could not put a price tag on the investment, but they said the potential market for their package is every American home with a television set.

BLIND LADY SOLD CAR

SAN DIEGO, Calif. — A car dealership that sold a car to a blind woman who says she thought she was only borrowing the vehicle has been cited for false and misleading advertising and unfair business practises.

District Attorney Charles Hayes filed the civil suit against Harrison Buick Opel of National City, listing 10 alleged victims including Ethel Wagner.

The action claims Mrs. Wagner and a daughter took her son's 1968 Opel to the dealer for repairs and was told the car was unsafe to operate. She then signed a sales contract for a 1972 model and drove away in the car.

Flood-Ravaged Area Heals

By BILL PARDUE
Associated Press Writer

LOVELAND, Col. (AP) — The flood-ravaged Big Thompson Canyon "looks like a capricious god danced amok in the place," Gov. Richard Lamm said after seeing the area where nearly 100 persons died.

"There is movement. The people are coming back. The healing process has begun."

Lamm flew by helicopter over the once majestically beautiful vacation area Tuesday and said while the devastation was great, the scene was more encouraging than it had been the morning after the rain-spawned flooding.

A 12-foot wall of water barrelled its way through the twisting river canyon on Saturday, floating houses away, smashing mobile homes against the towering rock walls and burying the dead under silt and slime.

While some who survived the flood returned to their washed out homes, others waited for word on the fate of their loved ones.

An unused hospital was set up as a morgue where identification was attempted for the battered and torn bodies recovered from where the rushing river had deposited them.

Seventy corpses were at the makeshift morgue here and Larimer County Sheriff Robert Watson said more bodies were waiting to be removed from collection centres at each end of the canyon.

National Guardmen, volunteers and search and rescue teams began a fourth day of searching today among logjams of "twisted metal and splintered wood for more dead.

Watson, who earlier predicted an eventual death toll of 200, scaled down the figure to 100-150. But he admitted to reporters, "Your guess is as good as mine."

Cordon Bleu Touch for Trout

1 three-quarter-pound trout, preferably boned but not filleted
2 tablespoons butter
2 teaspoons finely chopped shallots
Salt and freshly ground pepper
4 raw shrimp, shelled and deveined
2 mushrooms, thinly sliced, about three-quarters cup
¼ cup dry white wine
¼ cup fish broth or fresh or bottled clam juice
½ cup heavy cream.
1 egg yolk
Juice of half a lemon
2 tablespoons whipped cream, optional.

1. Preheat oven to 400 degrees.

2. Rinse the trout and pat dry inside and out.

3. Butter a baking dish large enough to hold the trout with one tablespoon butter. Sprinkle with the shallots and add the trout (do not open it up). Sprinkle lightly with salt and pepper to taste.

4. Scatter the shrimp and mushrooms around the trout. Add the wine and clam juice and cover loosely with a piece of wax paper, lightly buttered. Bake 20 minutes.

5. Remove the fish and shrimp and keep warm. Pour and scrape the cooking liquid and mushroom slices into a saucepan. Bring to the boil and let cook until quite thick. Do not let the sauce stick or burn.

6. Carefully pull away and discard the skin on both sides of the trout. This is easily done with the fingers. Leave the skin on the head and tail. Using the fingers, remove the thin backbone from the back of the fish. Arrange the trout on a heatproof serving dish.

7. Using a fork, carefully remove the mushrooms from the sauce and arrange them over the fish. Arrange the shrimp on either side.

8. Stir the heavy cream into the sauce remaining in the saucepan. Bring to the boil. Spoon out about one-quarter cup of the sauce and to this add the egg yolk and lemon juice, beating well with a fork. Spoon and scrape this mixture into the sauce and cook, stirring constantly, just until the sauce thickens. Swirl in the remaining one tablespoon butter. Add salt and pepper to taste. Strain the sauce over the fish and, if desired, run the trout under a very hot broiler until lightly glazed. The sauce will glaze better if whipped cream is folded into the sauce before running the trout under the broiler, but the whipped cream is not essential.

Yield: Two servings.

Soy Flour Protein In Tasty Cookies

To try this soy flour perhaps for your first time make a batch of Soy-Peanut Cookies. They go into school lunches with you knowing youngsters will love them.

Make sure the adults have a chance at the cookies; too. The recipe makes about 4 dozen.

Soy-Peanut Cookies

½ cup oil or soft margarine
one-third cup sugar
2 small eggs
½ cup peanut butter
¼ cup water
½ tsp. salt
1 cup wholewheat flour
1 cup unbleached flour
½ cup soy flour

Beat margarine, sugar and eggs together. Add peanut butter and water, and beat again. Add mixed and sifted flours with salt and stir until just blended.

Drop by spoon on greased cookie sheet; mould with fingers and flatten a little. Bake in moderate oven 177 deg. C; until brown.

This is a project to turn over to an interested schoolager in the afternoon, to make a batch of unusually good cookies. Be sure that some are left to be taken to school to brag about. That is half the fun of helping at home.

Soy flour is usually sold only in one-pound bags for relatively small quantities are used. It must be kept fresh and free from a rancid flavor. Always see that the bag is closely rolled down to exclude air; and then keep it in a cool dry place. If no cool cupboard available it is best to store soy flour and soy grits, tightly closed on refrigerator door.

These two soy products are an economical way of adding good quality protein to a low-meat budget. In some ways, they are handier to use than the soy beans — whole.

ORGANIC GARDEN SUCCESS

FREMONT, Neb. (AP) — Faced with the prospect of living off a meagre income, Rev. J. Graydon Wilson and his wife Hortense turned their backyard organic gardening into a new life as modern homesteaders.

The Wilsons, both 62, retired last year and discovered they were too young for a pension. Turning to full-time gardening, they produced and stored enough food on their 1½ acres of land to provide 75 per cent of their food supply. The Wilsons estimate they will eventually produce as much as 90 per cent of their food.

Wilson sees organic gardening as a "companionship" of man and nature that is becoming increasingly popular.

Organic gardeners prefer manure, grass and leaves for a compost and avoid chemical fertilizers and toxic insecticides.

"We're beginning to understand our ancestors' practices and their use of natural fertilizers, mulches, and even insects and bacteria," Wilson said.

He uses no commercial fertilizers, he said, because they "take away the initiative" of bateria and may even destroy them.

The Wilsons have planted 30 vegetables, 15 fruit trees and bushes and grape vines. They raise chickens, keep a dairy cow and are raising two calves. Only household products, citrus fruits, poultry and fish that they can't produce themselves are bought at the supermarket.

They plan to "put more little creatures to work" with a beehive and will go into honey production.

They see themselves as missionaries spreading the word about organically grown food. Wilson taught organic gardening at a community college in Columbus, Neb., and this spring is teaching a class in Fremont.

"People eat with us and say it tastes so good, so wholesome and fresh, so much better than what they've had," said Mrs. Wilson.

Her husband uses a hand mill to grind wheat for flour and cereal. She freezes and cans fruits and vegetables and makes cottage cheese. They also bake their own bread and churn butter.

Wilson says more people could garden. What it takes is "a little plot of garden, ever so small."

"You've got a big lawn; you don't need it. You can't eat grass."

dear abby

DEAR ABBY: There is a divorcee in my husband's office who has a small child and lots of problems. I really blew my stack when Paul told me that he lent her $1,500 so she could have (are you ready for this?) silicone implants to increase the size of her breasts!

This girl told Paul that a psychologist told her that her feelings of insecurity stemmed from the fact that she had always been flat-chested, and the silicone implants would make her feel more womanly and self-confident.

Abby, I don't want to appear unreasonable, but I can't see where the size of this girl's breasts are anything my husband should be concerned with. What are your thoughts on the subject? — SHORT FUSE IN LONGVIEW

DEAR SHORT: At least your husband made a clean breast of his uplifting generosity. Ask him what the terms of the loan were — ALL of them.

DEAR ABBY: A year ago I married a childless widower. He had been happily married for over 20 years until his first wife died five years ago. I was a widow with grown children. Everyone told me how lucky I was to get him because he was very well-to-do.

He is a good husband, but I feel like a substitute for his first wife. He still carries her picture in his wallet instead of mine, and on my birthday and at Christmas he presents me with a piece of her jewelry. I feel uncomfortable wearing her things in the presence of those who remember seeing them on her.

I have made a very nice home for him, but I almost feel as though I am working for my room and board — and bedroom privileges. I'm not a mercenary, but I long for some identity of my own.

I've always kept the memory of my first husband from intruding into this marriage. Why do I feel like an intruder myself? — NUMBER TWO.

DEAR NUMBER TWO: Because you don't have the courage to tell him that (a) it hurts you that he carries his deceased wife's picture in his wallet instead of yours, and (b) you don't enjoy hand-me-down jewelry.

DEAR ABBY: Athough my wife is reasonable most of the time, she refuses to acknowledge that it is her duty to hop out of bed first in the morning and get the coffee going.

We have a double bed and established routines make it impractical for us to arise simultaneously.

I hope you will admonish my spouse for her unwifely and stubborn non-action. — VICTIM OF FEMALE CHAUVINIST.

DEAR VIC: You rattled the wrong cage. By whose decree is it your wife's duty to hop out of bed first? I think you should compromise and alternate.

Island 'Show' Forest Plan

DUNCAN — A 13-mile demonstration forest is expected to be announced in September, it has been learned.

The forest, extending from the North Cowichan municipal boundary along the Cowichan Valley highway to the turnoff at the village of Lake Cowichan, will serve several purposes.

It will aide in management of the roadside forest along the highway to maintain its ethetic value, provide a demonstration forest and an outdoor classroom of forest management practices, and complement the historical education program of the B.C. Forest Museum in Duncan.

No official announcement of the project has been made by representatives of the forest industry, B.C. Forest Service and the Canadian Institute of Forestry.

Specific resource management guidelines for the project have been formulated by major land owners — B.C. Forest Service, Pacific Logging Co. Ltd. and Rayonier Canada Ltd. — together with the Cowichan Valley regional district.

They include stand improvement practices, maintenance and improvement of scenic viewpoints along the highway, preservation of some older trees to grow to maturity and encouragement of other landowners along the highway to co-operate in the project.

Financial support is expected to come from the B.C. Forest Service. There are also indiciations that the forest companies involved are willing to assist financially.

Financier Goes on Trial

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Financier Bernard Cornfeld went on trial Tuesday on charges of cheating the telephone company by having his secretaries use two "blue box" devices to make telephone calls to Europe.

The government will play tape recordings of some of the 343 calls to Geneva, London and other European cities allegedly made with the boxes between July, 1974, and January, 1975, a prosecutor said.

INDIAN GRANTS AWARDED

Seven Vancouver Island Indian projects were among 42 in B.C. to share $218,308 in grants from the First Citizens' Fund, according to Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy.

The grants are for cultural and recreational projects which must be initiated and controlled by Indian residents.

The Vancouver Island grants include: Nanaimo Indian band, $10,944 for a recreation program; Nimpkish Indian band, $8,400 to hire a recreation worker; Cowichan Indian band, $1,200 to meet expenses of the girls' and boys' clubs; Campbell River Golden Eagles soccer club, $500 to hold an all-Indian soccer tournament; Ucluelet Indian band, $2,000 for recreation; Songhees Recreation Commission, $2,625 for an All-Native Olympiad; and Nanaimo Indian band, $560 for a softball playoff round.

Region Shuns Airport

NANAIMO — The regional district here doesn't want to take over operation of the Cassidy Airport and has urged the city of Nanaimo to try to run it.

A takeover proposal met with firm resistance from several regional board directors after more than a year of study. Opponents feared the airport would become a tax burden and last Tuesday Owen Kennedy, chairman of the regional board's transportation committee, recommended the board turn the matter back to the city.

The airport is currently leased by the city from the Ministry of Transport.

It took two votes and a lengthy procedural wrangle before the regional board agreed to the move.

Kennedy's motion was first defeated on a tie vote, but after further debate in which Kennedy said he could not recommend regional administration of the airport unless the entire board was behind it, a motion by Nanaimo alderman Ted Kelly, almost identical to Kelly's, was passed unanimously.

"I think the city can have the airport operating in less time than it takes the regional board to debate the matter," Kelly said.

Sawmill Opening Delayed

COWICHAN BAY — The sawmill operated here by Doman Industries will remain closed for another week awaiting a permit to dump refuse hog fuel on municipal land near Chemainus.

The mill, closed since July 1 for what was originally intended as a two-week maintenance and vacation break, was scheduled to reopen Aug. 1 after a two-week extension of the closure. Internal operating problems and the need to find a dumping ground forced the extension.

Joe Frumento, vice-president in charge of timber and manufacturing, said Tuesday the company is still awaiting a pollution control permit to dump the refuse hog fuel.

"The pollution control board has told us we should get it in the next seven days, so we should be operating at the Cowichan Bay mill by the 10th of this month," he said.

Earlier, Doman received approval in principal from North Cowichan municipal council to dump refuse chip and bark on 14 acres of municipal land, subject to pollution control board approval.

Frumento said at that time if the company could not find a place to dump by Aug. 15, it would have to close not only the Cowichan Bay mill but also its mill at Chemainus, which employs more than 300.

Burial Refused

SEATTLE (AP) — Emma L. Schafer has been refused burial in the grave next to her husband's that she purchased and paid for some 20 years ago.

Acadia Cemetery said Tuesday it was unwilling to bury the 80-year-old woman's body because of a $54 cut in state burial payments. The huge costs of Mrs. Schafer's hospital and nursing care in the last three years of her life made her a public assistance case.

Her daughter, Joyce Van Kleeck, says her mother was paralyzed for those years following an operation for a malignant brain tumor.

"Our first reaction was to get a shovel and do it ourselves," says Mrs. Van Kleeck. "They can't hurt mother. But it was her wish to be buried beside Dad, she had prepared for that when they bought the grave-sites, and it is where she belongs."

Helping Cut Flowers to Last

The warmer days of the past week have brought small problems to the gardener, and to the homemaker who likes to use her own garden flowers for indoor decoration. The flowers are not lasting so well as in the cooler days.

Several points are worth remembering in handling cut flowers for the home when temperatures are high both outdoors and in. First is that flowers cut in early morning while stems are still cool will last longer. And if the plants have been kept well supplied with moisture at their roots, the stems will still contain moisture.

Most garden flowers may be cut before the blossoms are fully expanded and then they will look fresh for an extra day. Daisy-type flowers should be picked while the centre yellow disk still retains a golden color. The disk is composed of the true flowers and the yellow is pollen. After the flowers have been pollinated, usually by insects, the pollen turns brownish and the blossoms lose their freshness and soon wither.

Take a deep container of water to the garden and place each flower stem in the water as soon as cut. If cut, and carried to the house without water, the ends are already sealed and are slow in water intake. Some never recover.

Placing the blooms for an hour or two in deep cool water up to the heads, in a cool and preferably dark place will add as much as two days to their life. The stems should be recut while held under water after being brought in from the garden unless put into water immediately. For roses this treatment results in every half-opened rose opening fully before fading; cut a half inch off under water each day.

After the flowers are arranged in vase or bowl, be sure that as much water as possible is maintained in the container. This is not so much for intake but the larger body of water provides a more humid climate around the flowers. This is much more to their liking than the normally dry air of the dwelling, and is the reason a bunch of cut flowers in a humid greenhouse will last longer by a week than a similar bunch in the house.

If one flower of a cluster should fade because it is more mature than the others, it can be neatly snipped off to keep the arrangement looking fresh. Placing the container on the floor out of sunshine will give it a few degrees lower temperature than if on a table. Do this during the warm part of the day when the room is not in use.

And a plea to gardeners who love to present their choicest blooms to other people to enjoy — cut them in the cool of the morning or at dusk, keep them in deep water in a cool place until the happy recipient is present, and then wrap the stems in wet paper and shield with a complete paper wrapper to deep the sun off while being taken home.

Flowers cut during a hot afternoon and presented, dry stemmed, to a friend to carry in the hand without protection have little chance of survival.

Garden beauty is too precious to be treated so casually.

MP Gives Warning On Pen Security

Times News Services

NEW WESTMINSTER — Guards at the B.C. Penitentiary here have warned prison authorities in writing of the danger of a new hostage-taking incident, MP John Reynolds said Tuesday.

Reynolds, Conservative MP for Burnaby-Richmond-Delta, called for new clamps on prison security and complained that promises of tighter security made after the slaying of prison worker Mary Steinhauser have not been kept.

In a July 15 memorandum, 12 security officers, mainly supervisors, say inmate Ivan Horvat, serving life for non-capital murder, is seeing his girlfriend and a prison worker without supervision, says Reynolds. The girlfriend has assumed the role of legal adviser to see Horvat more frequently.

The allegation is being investigated by regional prison authorities.

Doug McGregor, deputy regional director of inmate programs, denies dangerous prisoners are seeing anyone without supervision.

"Horvat had a visit from a friend recently and three security officers were outside the door at all times," he said Tuesday. "Horvat was searched thoroughly afterwards."

McGregor said he is checking the claim that Horvat is seeing his girlfriend under the pretence of legal advice meetings. "That is an offence which could lead to the termination of future visits by woman," he said. "She must be a qualified legal adviser."

On June 9, 1975, three inmates grabbed 15 employees and held them hostage until a tactical squad stormed the prison area. The 41-hour siege ended in a shootout and Miss Steinhauser, a prison classification officer, was killed.

Records show that in March last year a gun and 10 rounds of ammunition were found in Horvat's cell.

Reynolds also complained that inmates have access to literature explaining the workings of hand weapons.

Reynolds said the only way to improve security at the Pen is to increase staff and upgrade wages to peace officers and sheriff standards.

"The Pen has seen a 50 per cent turnover in staff so far this year and 20 employees a day are working overtime," he said.

"They only way to bring the Pen up to maximum staff levels to bring wages in line with sheriffs and police officers."

McGregor said he was not concerned that the Firearms book was in the Pen library. About 95 per cent of the inmates know how to make weapons without referring to books, he said.

Beep Softball Game Played by Blind

By TONDA RUSH

LAWRENCE, Kan. (AP) — On a Sunday afternoon in a park, a group of dignified-looking adults were swatting at a sound.

Some hit it, some didn't. It flew by at moderate speeds in an oversized softball that emitted a little beep like one might expect from a Soviet satellite or a telephone left too long off the hook.

The players were blind — some permanently and some because they were wearing blindfolds.

They were playing beep softball, a variation that allows the visually handicapped to compete with skill and safety.

The Lawrence team consisted of five men and women with little or no sight anf five sighted friends who blindfolded themselves for the game.

The organizer and spokesman, a Korean War veteran named Charlie Vassallo, plays with a patch over the one eye in which he has light perception. With the help of several coaches who can see, Vassallo prods his team-mates into proficiency at hitting and fielding, purely on the basis of sound.

He explains the game on a round dart board with pushpin players that facilitates a mental image of the playing field. There are seven fielders and a batter, all blind. A sighted pitcher and catcher play impartially for both squads.

The batter stands in a circle with a radius of 36 feet. The bases are 18-inch rubber pylons with beepers attached and the ball has a circumference of 14 or 16 inches. It weights about a pound and beeps continuously.

The pitcher throws, the batter swings. If he hits the ball, an "umpire" activates a beep in one of the pylons that has a different tone than the one in the ball. The batter starts running for the pylon, while a fielder goes after the peeping ball with the guidance of two assistants.

If the batter reaches the pylon before the fielder reaches the ball, it's a run. If not, he's out.

Each side gets five outs per inning, but if a fielder should perform the rare feat of catching the beeping ball in mid-air the inning ends.

Even with the beeper, hitting the ball is hard and two hits in 50 swings is average.

"You hear about eye-hand co-ordination," said Gary Marshall, who played on a Houston Astros farm team before he was blinded in 1964. "This is sort of ear-hand co-ordination. One of the rules of baseball is to keep your eye on the ball. Obviously, you have to forget that and concentrate on listening."

The players who can see but are blindfolded are also frustrated. Their sense of balance is distorted. Their memories falter in their total concentration on sound and their senses tend to blur.

Said one player from behind her blindfold: "It's weird. You want to cheat."

Chief Judge To Keep Sitting

EDMONTON (CP)—Alberta's chief provincial judge says he will continue to sit on the bench to keep in touch with the province's lower court system.

Judge Robert Allan Cawsey 53, who was named to the post in March, said that will help him find answers to problems facing the courts.

"My responsibility is to give us the best provincial court system in Canada," he said, adding that by sitting on the bench, "that's the only way I can know all the problems and procedures."

Judge Cawsey has set definite goals for himself and some subtle, gentle changes he wants to bring in.

The judge said he wants to improve the "care and feeding of witnesses."

"The system treats witnesses just one step above the accused. I've known this since I was young but I was never in a position to do anything about it."

Another area of concern is traffic offences. Judge Cawsey wants a "workable" demerit system where, after so many demerits, a driver's licence is suspended.

The judge is arranging for the 76 judges under him to exchange sittings in rural and city courts and he wants to improve the flow of cases by tightening courtroom procedures.

The son of an RCMP officer, he joined the force at age 18, dropping out of school while "struggling along in Grade 12". But his police career lasted only one year. he enlisted in the army, went overseas as a lieutenant in the Calgary Regiment in 1942, and was wounded twice in Italy.

After the Second World War, he remained active in the reserves, retiring in 1961 as a lieutenant-colonel, commanding officer of the 19th Alberta Dragoons in Edmonton.

"All things being equal, I would have stayed in the army but there was no place to go and I couldn't go back to the RCMP," he said.

He turned to law, after completing high school, and graduated in the 1951 law class at University of Alberta. He practised law with a Wetaskiwin firm before being appointed a provincial judge in 1973.

Why would a lawyer want to become a judge?

"The thing about being a judge is not being a lawyer," Judge Cawsey said.

"The pay is not overwhelming. I suppose in the eyes of the public, there's prestige in being a judge, but it never got me a seat in a restaurant."

With a judgeship, he said, comes a regularity of hours, a welcome change of pace, "but not a soft touch" in a demanding profession.

"You perform the ultimate type of legal service."

The key to proper declarer's play in today's deal rested in his interpretation of why the East defender had made a certain play at trick two. Once the correct interpretation had been made, the contract was assured. Had it not been made, there could be no recovery for declarer.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	2 ♠	Pass
2 ♡	Pass	3 NT	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ♡.

After dummy's king of hearts had captured the opening lead, declarer's problem was, in a sense, a simple one: how was he going to develop three spade tricks in the teeth of the fact that dummy's second heart entry would undoubtedly be knocked out when the defenders obtained the lead with the ace of spades?

At trick two, the four of spades was led out of the dummy. Had East supinely betrayed his cause by playing the jack, declarer's course would be an automatic one. He would take the jack with the king, after which he would surrender the ten to East's ace.

Upon regaining the lead in his own hand, declarer would next play his remaining spade and finesse against West's marked nine of spades (East, with the tripleton A-J-9 of spades, would not have put up the jack on the initial spade lead. Hence East would be known to have started with the doubleton A-J).

But suppose that on the spade lead off dummy at trick two East puts up his ace. What do you play from the South hand? Our South declarer had no problem. He knew that East, a good player, would not have put up the ace unless he had been dealt either the singleton ace or the doubleton A-J. If the ace were a singleton, then South could never make three spade tricks since West, in this case, would have been dealt the J-9-7-5-2. But if East had the doubleton A-J, then the dropping of the ten-spot on the ace had to be the winning play.

East returned a heart to dummy's ace, after which declarer led a spade to his king, felling East's jack. Then came South's remaining spade, with West's nine being finessed. If South had not played the ten on East's ace, he could not have made three spade tricks.

Lottery Stub Identified Island Accident Victim

A Vancouver Island fisherman's family still was sought Tuesday by Victoria police after a holiday weekend which saw a fatal accident, a shooting and a stab-and-rob case.

A Lucky Leo Lottery ticket gave Victoria traffic police the identity of the traffic accident victim Sunday but the name still had not been released late Tuesday because the 25-year-old Zeballos man's wife and two children had not been found.

Police said the man was pronounced dead at Victoria General Hospital at 2:55 a.m. from head injuries suffered about 12:30 a.m. Sunday when he was hit by a car as he walked across Esquimalt Road near Dalton.

The victim carried no identification and his clothing yielded only $61.99 in cash, a package of cigarettes, a cigarette lighter and the lottery ticket. By 2:50 p.m., police had his name.

First, they phoned the main Lucky Leo official in Victoria, who suggested Vancouver headquarters be contacted. The Victoria police then asked Vancouver police to do that and, despite the fact it was Sunday morning, lottery officials were found and went to their office.

They discovered the ticket had been issued to a seller in Tofino. RCMP in Tofino went to the seller to get the victim's name.

Victoria police then learned from other sources that the victim arrived Saturday in Victoria from Kyuquot and was last seen by his friends in a downtown Victoria beer parlor late at night.

An inquest was set to begin at 7:30 p.m. Thursday in McCalls funeral parlor. Meanwhile, in Victoria provincial court, David Allen Smith, 26, of Edmonton was charged with failing to remain at an accident scene. Judge Blake Allan ordered $300 cash bail and remanded the case for one week so Smith can consult a lawyer.

Steven William Harris, 20, address not known, was admitted early Saturday to Victoria General Hospital with a broken left leg. Police said Harris had suffered a bullet wound in the lower leg and a bullet was recovered.

But they said Harris declined to give any information about the shooting incident, which occurred in an apartment on Pandora.

Ernest Williams, 34, of 2003 Cameron, needed 15 stitches Saturday afternoon at Victoria General Hospital to close a deep knife cut in his left kneecap. Williams told police a young man had stabbed him and robbed him of about $200 near Johnson Street bridge. Police found Williams collapsed at Wharf and Johnson.

Victoria police seized a 9-mm. pistol and a machine-gun at the residence of Daniel Robert O'Brien, 35, of 1145 Mason, early Monday. They went to the area after a citizen complained shots had been fired. The pistol contained three live rounds, police said.

In Sidney, RCMP said a body found July 16 by a Canadian boatman near Stewart Island east of Sidney had been identified as that of Delta resident Arthur Leslie Carlson, 22, reported missing Feb. 15. A coroner's inquiry will be held as there are indications the case might have involved suicide.

A search has been discontinued for the body of Frank Walsh, 44, of Nanaimo, missing and presumed drowned after his boat sank Sunday near Thetis Island 13 miles southeast of Nanaimo.

Police said John and Shirley Macdonald were rescued from Walsh's 41-foot boat as it sank.

COURT CHOPS BACK

ERRINGTON — What do you do when a surveyor starts chopping down trees on your property so he can "shoot" his survey?

You sue.

Most people do nothing but Errington residents Bentley Le Baron and James Jeffs decided to go to court after a surveyor cut down a number of trees along their property line April 5.

They won. The small claims court judge ruled that a surveyor is liable for any damage he causes while on private property and awarded Le Baron and Jeffs $100 damages.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 26-year-old Victoria area man with a record of three major narcotics offences will be sentenced Aug. 20 for trafficking in heroin, Judge William Ostler said Tuesday in Victoria provincial court.

Robert William Woods, address not known, pleaded guilty to a charge of selling one capsule of heroin for $45 Jan. 18 in Saanich to an undercover RCMP officer.

Woods also pleaded guilty to six other Victoria changes — one of shoplifting a $150 jacket Feb. 21 at Woolco, one of failing to pay for a $5.40 meal May 21 at a downtown Victoria cafe, two of failure to go to Wilkinson Road jail May 29 and June 5 to serve an intermittent term for impaired driving and two for failure to attend court.

Prosecutor Malcolm Macaulay said Woods had a record of 12 offences dating back to 1968, including trafficking in LSD in 1971 and possession of heroin in 1971 and 1973. Ostler asked for a pre-sentence report before sentence is set Aug. 20.

Ostler, who has said in the past that conditional discharges should be given only in exceptional cases, allowed one for Adrian Francis Hourigan, 17, of 23 Helmcken, but said he would not have done so if prosecutor Lang had not agreed to it.

Hourigan pleaded guilty to a charge of stealing three wheels and three tires July 28 from a parked car in Saanich. Defence lawyer Derek Brindle said the car was damaged and Hourigan stopped to see if anyone was hurt. A companion also charged but remanded, suggested the theft according to Brindle.

Lang said he supported a discharge because of police advice that Hourigan was "a follower and not a leader." Ostler said thefts of more than $200 like this were serious offences but allowed a conditional discharge with six months' probation.

The financial loss suffered by a Colwood fisherman who missed one trip while awaiting his B.C. Fishery Regulations charge caused Ostler to impose a minimal fine of $35 on each of the two counts.

Angus MacGillivray, 34, of 2250 Moyes, pleaded guilty to a charge of engaging in commercial fishing June 29 without a personal commercial licence or valid salmon-fishing licence tabs.

MacGillivray said he had missed the licence and tabs deadline by about two weeks and had been told he couldn't get them until the case was ended. He said that cost him one trip and prosecutor Nicholas Lang said the value of the June 29 catch was $5,364.

Richard Allan Murray, 17, of 3565 Upper Terrace, whose shirt made news on his first court appearance July 12 on one charge, appeared before Ostler on that charge and three others, and was remanded in custody to today for a bail hearing.

Murray was charged July 12 with possession July 10 in Saanich of a known stolen car. He was remandeed by Judge Blake Allan to July 19, released on own-recognizance $500 bail and asked to wear a different shirt next time. His T-shirt was labelled: "Bacchanalia, Victoria's Raunch and Roll Club."

Murray did not appear July 29 and now is charged with failure to appear, possession of a narcotic in Victoria, a theft in Saanich and the original matter.

Russell Thomas Pawlyk, 30, of 4930 Lochside, was found guilty by Ostler after a trial on a charge of defrauding The Bay last March by promising to pay for about $2,300 worth of furniture and a stereo set "when in fact he had no intention of so doing," Ostler noted Pawlyk had been in custody since June 16 while awaiting the outcome and ordered a nominal one-day jail term and and a $250 fine.

Blair Gorddon Birch, 27, of 889 Coverdale, and Jack Leon Case, 35, of 914 Inverness, were ordered to a higher court for trial after a preliminary hearing before Ostler of a joint charge of trafficking in marijuana March 11 in Saanich.

In the court section of Judge F. S. Green, a one-year term of probation was the penalty for Victoria area resident Donald Robert Fuller, 40, address not known. Fuller, originally facing four charges containing a total of 11 counts of obtaining food by fraud,, pleaded guilty to three of the counts. The others were stayed.

Four persons pleaded guilty Tuesday before traffic court Judge Blake Allan to separate charges of driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent.

They were Bradley William Harris, 17, of 973 Caledonia, stopped July 24 in Saanich and fined $400; Ian MacDonald Ball, 20, HMCS Qu'Appelle, July 26 in Victoria and $450; Karl William Hamm, 48, of 433 Government, July 23 in Victoria and $200, and Russell McArthur, 20, of Sayward, July 31 in Saanich and $500.

Other major traffic fines, also following guilty pleas, were $500 against Robert Alfred Loiseau, 45, of 1315 Esquimalt, stopped Monday in Victoria for impaired driving, and $500 against Gordon Allan Glanville, 49, of 356 Burnside West, stopped July 3 in Victoria for failing to remain at an accident scene.

Argentine Army Shoots 3 Leftists

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — The army killed three leftist guerrillas and seized an underground printing press Tuesday in its second clash with urban guerrillas this week, an army communique said.

The communique said the three were killed in a raid in the city of Rosario, 195 miles northwest of Buenos Aires. In a similar raid in the same city Monday, four members of the People's Revolutionary Army died in a shootout with security forces.

The communique said security forces in Rosario stormed into a house containing a clandestine printing shop, shooting two men and a woman who tried to stop them.

This year 741 persons have died in Argentina's political violence — 546 of them, including 321 guerrillas, since the military government took over March 24.

Former Gulf Exec Jailed

TULSA, Okla. (UPI) — William Viglia, retired comptroller of the Gulf Oil Corp., received a one-year prison sentence Tuesday for lying to the Watergate Grand Jury.

Viglia, 71, of Tulsa, pleaded guilty to the charge July 1 saying he did not know $4 million he brought into the United States from the Bahamas was being used to make illegal campaign contributions.

U.S. District Court Judge Dale Cook said he could not find any reason for Viglia to lie to the grand jury after he had been given immunity for his testimony by U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica.

Viglia could have been sentenced to a maximum of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine.

Harry Crowe, Viglia's attorney, asked the judge to consider a suspended sentence, saying the one-year sentence was "somewhat harsh." The judge declined.

Viglia lied to the grand jury during its investigation into the "Bahama X arrangement" by which Gulf funds were brought into the United States from the Bahamas, where Viglia lived, and used for illegal campaign contributions. Cook said Viglia was ordered not to keep records of the cash transactions although the defendant did keep his own private record.

Viglia, who retired in March, 1975, was charged with transporting $4.5 million into the United States during 12½ years.

Viglia admitted while pleading guilty to the charge he was not told how the funds were used.

Viglia was accused of lying when he told the grand jury he had abided by customs regulations which went into effect in 1972 and required persons to declare their possession of more than $5,000 in United States currency when entering the country. He also was charged with lying when he told the grand jury he never had been questioned about $25,000 in cash found in his briefcase.

Viglia had said his mistake was not taking advantage of the immunity given to him by Sirica.

Pipeline Checks 'Token'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Two environmental groups charged Tuesday the interior department has taken only "token gestures" to correct persistent welding problems on the Alaska oil pipeline before the Arctic winter begins.

In a letter made public Tuesday, officials of the Wilderness Society and Friends of the Earth asked Interior Secretary Thomas Kleppe to order a full inspection of the partly constructed pipeline.

Both groups were plaintiffs in a suit which helped make sure strict environmental and technical stipulations, including requirements of records on x-rays of all welds, were contained in the 1974 agreement for construction of the pipeline.

They said auditors' findings that builders' records of welding x-rays are in poor order show the interior department has not fulfilled its responsibilities.

"Only careless quality control procedures and lack of vigorous enforcement by the responsible federal agencies could have allowed this situation to continue a full year after problems were first uncovered," said their letter dated July 29.

"We cannot tolerate violations of these stipulations. We will not sit idly by if the department of the interior continues to exercise but token gestures to enforce compliance with these stipulations."

The department told the builders, Alyeska Pipeline Service Co., July 20 to bring its records into "auditable condition at the earliest possible time."

"The enforcement measures . . . appear to be aimed at stalling any corrective action until correction (of welding flaws) is no longer practical, given construction schedules and the onslaught of the Arctic winter," they said.

"What we needed in September 1975 and what we need even more desperately now is a physical inspection of actual construction."

The groups said there is also evidence of "noncompliance" in other areas such as treatment of wastewater effluent at construction camps and the leak detection system.

Air Bag, Seat Belt Merits Argued

WASHINGTON (AP) — Automakers and insurance firms clashed Tuesday over whether air bags or seat belts were the best way to protect drivers and automobile riders from death and injury in traffic accidents.

The confrontation came as Transportation Secretary William T. Coleman Jr. held an all-day public hearing to help him decide if the government should require so-called passive restraints such as air bags to protect motorists who refuse to buckle their seat belts.

Both sides generally agreed seat belts were effective — probably as effective as the space-age air bags — if only some way could be found to get drivers to use them.

But they parted ways when assessing the chances of getting the American public to buckle up. Only about 30 per cent of all motorists currently use their seat belts, surveys have shown.

Coleman has promised to decide by the end of the year what course of action the government will take. Options which he is known to be considering include keeping the present standard while testing air bags further, requiring states to pass mandatory seat belt use laws, and requiring automakers to offer air bags or some other form or passive restraint on all or some of their new cars.

Currently, the government allows automakers to install either the lap and shoulder belt combination of air bags or a combination of the two. Most automakers have opted for the lap and shoulder belts although General Motors has built about 6,000 luxury cars with air bags.

Transportation Department studies have indicated both air bags and seat belts have about the same degree of effectiveness in protecting drivers and passengers in a crash.

A major issue in the debate before Coleman is how far the federal government should go to protect motorists who refuse to protect themselves.

TRIDENT CRITICS CONVICTED

SEATTLE (UPI) — Three women pacifists who remained silent during their 40-minute federal trial were convicted Tuesday of destruction of government property.

The three used wire-cutters to cut a fence on the perimeter of the Trident nuclear submarine base at Bangor May 17. Federal Court Judge Donald Voorhees set Aug. 27 for sentencing of the women, each convicted on two counts of destruction of government property worth less than $100.

Voorhees ordered a probation report for Jo Maynes, Laurie Raymond and Alice Ray-Keil, members of the Pacific Life Community, and invited the women to write letters explaining their actions.

Ms. Ray-Keil said the three probably would not co-operate with the probation process.

Rail Unions Appeal AIB Rollbacks

B.C. Rail unions will appeal "deplorable" rollbacks ordered by the Anti-Inflation Board in judgments released Tuesday, union joint council chairman Jack Whittaker said today.

And although it is not yet known whether the AIB ruling calls for re-payment of retroactive cash, Whittaker said the 1,400 union members affected have been instructed to hold tight.

No re-payment will take place, he said, until the appeal against the rollback is completed and the situation is clarified.

Whittaker said if the provincial government used its influence on the AIB, the process could be speeded up.

"The AIB had this decision ready in three weeks, whereas it takes others seven or eight months . . . maybe the provincial government could use its influence again," said Whittaker.

"The due process of law is proceeding; the appeal may be granted and until that decision comes down, why should we pay? It's the railway's problem," he said.

Meanwhile BCR vice-president Mac Norris said he will be meting with union representatives and arbitrator Owen B. Shime "as soon as possible" to discuss ramifications of the AIB rollback.

Heaviest decrease was the AIB recommendation that the 34.26 per cent increase for instrument levelmen, rodmen and chainmen, be rolled back to 9.7 per cent.

The group is represented by the International Union of Operating Engineers, Local 115, and the rollback, says Whittaker; is "something we didn't expect at all."

"We thought the AIB would have looked at the justification for the increases. It sounds hell-high, but it's not, the wage rates for those employees were so damn low they started at $3.72 an hour."

B.C. Rail officials said today at is not known whether the AIB ruling brought down in Ottawa specifies that wages paid under the contracts must be paid back to the company.

In the three arbitrated agreements, however, there is provision that the arbitrator will retain jursidiction in implementing AIB rollbacks. His recommendations, both management and the unions agreed, would be binding.

If payback provisions are not specified, presumably Shime would decide what process would be used.

"But you can't pass all the buck to the arbitrator," said Whittaker, "He's no magi-

Red Roses Blooming Disgrace

LONDON (TNS) — Are Red roses exempt from England's watering baEn?

There's a diplomatic hassle brewing over the question.

Seems that the roses in the Russian embassy in London are blooming lovely compared to the flowers in the gardens adjacent to the embassy property.

Property owners, peeved because the embassy roses are in full flower while their own roses and lawns are brown and withered due to lack of water, protested to the British foreign office and the London water board.

Because of recent drought conditions in Britain, all watering of gardens has been banned.

So far, Soviet spokesman are claiming the embassy property is Russian territory and exempt from any local laws or bylaws.

Anacortes Ferry To Stop?

Engineers of Washington State ferries will strike Aug. 31, closing down the Sidney to Anacortes run unless a contract is signed before that time, the chief spokesman for the engineers said today.

The ferry makes two trips a day in the summer season and has been carrying full loads of 160 cars and several hundred passengers between Wahsington State and Vancouver Island since B.C. Ferries' rates were raised.

Roy Vincent, branch agent of the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, said the ferry service would be halted by a walkout unless a contract is signed before September.

The engineers' association can not call a strike but the majority of the 103 men involved have said they will not work after Aug. 31 without a contract.

Vincent said the walkout is not authorized by the Marine Engineers Beneficial Association, which is required to provide employees to the state-owned company, even if the contract has expired.

"However, it would be a hopeless task for me to try to obtain enough engineers to run the ferry system if the men walk out."

Vincent said the association is studying ways to get supplies to the San Juan Islands that would normally be supplied by Washington State ferries.

The association would see that the island communities received the minimum services necessary to survive. However, this policy would not extend to Vancouver Island, which has alternative methods of obtaining supplies from the mainland.

The engineers are seeking a pay raise of 15 per cent.

If the engineers walk out, it would be the second strike against the company in two years, despite the fact there is some question as to whether the walkouts are legal.

In 1974 the unlicensed seamen walked out and gained a two-year contract which has another nine months to run.

China Still Shaking But B.C. Tours Safe

Within 24 hours there have been reassuring reports on two parties of British Columbia tourists in China as slight earth tremors continue to be felt in earthquake-torn Peking.

The first message came in a cable received Tuesday by the Thomas Cook Travel office in Victoria.

The firm's spokesman John Caldwell said a 25-member Victoria party headed by Dr. Edward Owen of the University of Victoria reported all members of the party were safe.

But their trip to the capital has now been cancelled and they are being re-routed to Shanghai, Caldwell said. The group will be in China until Aug. 10.

The second piece of good news was received today by Richard Phillips, 988 Claremont, whose wife Milly is leading another party of 24 British Columbians.

Phillips said it was the first information he had received from his wife or any official source since he learned a week ago that tour members were well but sheltering in the Canadian embassy for safety.

While he had been reassuring himself that no news was good news, Phillips admitted until the letter arrived today, he had been "a bit anxious"

In the letter, dated July 29, his wife told him the party was waiting for a plane to be transferred to the northern city of Dairen. Meanwhile, all members were well and had suffered no loss of personal property.

"It appears they were going to continue with a possibly shortened visit," Phillips said, although the letter gave no further details of their travel plans.

Mrs. Phillips wrote that at the epicentre of the earthquake some 100 miles away in the coal mining region "things were very bad" and a party of French visitors had "suffered very badly."

It's not the first time he has had to wait anxiously for news of his wife, who was born in China and worked there as a teacher.

"I had a similar experience a few years ago," he recalled. "My wife took a tour to Hong Kong and down to the Philippines and Thailand. On the way back there were in the midst of a typhoon and I had no information of her whereabouts for several days."

News reports out of Peking said slight earth tremors were felt today, a few hours after the Chinese authorities had recommended that the Chinese population and the foreign community should "maintain vigilance" during the earthquake alert.

The siutaiton in the capital remained calm and the six million-odd people living in the streets continued to consolidate their shelters and refuges in an orderly and disciplined manner.

The foreign community is still living in military tents provided by the authorities or in the entrance halls of embassies.

Auditor-General Search Underway

British Columbia Tuesday took the first step in the cross-country search for an auditor-general who will act as a watchdog of the province's financial accounts.

The 13-member all-party legislative commiteee which will choose the auditor-general met for the first time to map out a national advertising campaign outlining the qualifications necessary for the $52,000-a-year job.

The committee, comprised of eight Socred MLAs, three NDP members and the Liberal and Conservative leaders, elected Jim Hewitt (SC — Boundary Similkameen) as its chairman.

The Public Service Commission was authorized by the committee to draw up an ad to be placed in newspapers across the country, but the ad will be circulated among committee members for their comments before it is published.

The competition for the auditor-general closes Nov. 1.

Fresh Riots Break Out In S. Africa

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Police opened fire on some 20,000 black demonstrators in Soweto township today and witnesses said at least three persons were killed and 18 others injured.

But police denied anyone was killed in the clash and said about 12 people were injured. They claimed the segregated black township was calm and under control.

The witnesses included a black journalist who said he was carrying one of the victims to a hospital when he died.

It was the first major outbreak of violence in Soweto since a student demostration on June 16 touched off an upheaval in black townships around Johannesburg and Pretoria in which at least 176 persons were killed and more than 1,100 injured. All but two of the dead and most of the injured were black.

Witnesses reported the township, home to more than one million blacks, was in chaos today as roving mobs set fire to shops and cars. A key railway signal block was burned. Commuter trains were halted.

Heavily armed police were reported touring the township, eight miles south of Johannesburg, in armoured personnel carriers and dispersing crowds with tear gas. Police sealed off all exits with roadblocks.

Trouble was also reported in the black township of Alexandra, adjoining white residential areas in northern Johannesburg. Police said there were two attempts there to set schools on fire.

The outbreak in Soweto apparently was touched off by the recent detention of several student leaders, including Hlaku Rachidi, president of the Black People's Convention, and Ben Palmer Louw, a former leader of the black South African Students Organization. A number of other students have been under detention since the June riots.

Factories and other businesses in Johannesburg reported thousands of blacks absent from work.

Rioting was reported spreading through the township. Hundreds of riot police in camouflage battle fatigues and police in civilian clothes armed with submachine guns and rifles sealed off the area.

The police barred all other whites from Soweto, telling them it was not safe for them.

ESCAPER HELD IN BANK HEIST

William Head escapee David Gary Bennett, 28, was today charged with armed robbery in a $15,000 holdup Tuesday at a Burnaby branch of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

Charged jointly is Stephen Albert Hall, of New Westminster, who is in Royal Columbian Hospital after being shot by RCMP during the robbery.

Both men were arrested when police arrived at the scene as the two men attempted to find the keys to their getaway car.

Bennett, serving a 10-year term for robbery and possession of narcotics, escaped May 21 from a party of William Head inmates who had been given leave to attend a bowling party at Mayfair Lanes.

Tree Topples Killing Girls

Special to the Times

BUTTLE LAKE — The death of two young girls whose tent was crushed by a falling tree Monday night may alter B.C. provincial campsite policy, a parks official said today.

Laurie Jean Primrose, 10, and Tracy Lee Deakins, 9, both of Campbell River, are believed to have died instantly when a 175-foot Douglas fir uprooted for no appatent reazon and crashed onto their Ralph River campsite at Strathcona Park.

District parks superintendent Gordon Rathbone of Miracle Beach said it was a freak accident, to his knowledge the first fatality due to a falling tree in a B.C. provincial campsite.

The campsite is on a delta where the Ralph River empties into the south end of Buttle Lake about 43 miles from Campbell River, with about 100 individual sites scattered among a stand of mature trees.

Rathbone described it as a climax forest similar to the trees in Cathedral Grove on the Alberni highway.

"There is always an inherent danger in these situations," Rathbone said, despite the efforts of the parks branch.

Asked whether it was possible the campsite would be relocated, away from overmature trees, Rathbone said:

"Campsite policy will have to come under review."

Parksmen removed about 50 large trees and 20 smaller ones in a routine snag program last November. Rathbone said any suspect trees are cut down each fall.

But the tree which fell Monday appeared to be healthy until it exposed its root system and disclosed a rotted tap root which Rathbone said would have been "very difficult to discern."

The tree stood in sandy, gravelly soil, he said.

It had been breezy along the lakeshore Monday afternoon, but the air was still when the tree toppled around 10 p.m. while the girls slept. The trunk fell directly across their tent.

"They wouldn't know what hit them," Campbell River RCMP said.

The parents of one girl, Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Primrose, were in a trailer parked about 75 yards away from the tent.

Thomson Dies

LONDON (UPI) — Lord Thomson, the Canadian-born newspaper magnate, died in a hospital today at age 82.

Thomson, chairman of the Thomson Organization which owns The Times and The Sunday Times, and close to 50 Canadian daily newspapers was admitted to the hospital a month ago for treatment of a chest infection following a cold and a subsequent stroke.

His body is being flown to Canada for burial in Toronto.

According to former Canadian prime minister John Diefenbaker Thomson was "the greatest Canadian of his time."

Roy Thomson, the son of a barber, built up a newspaper empire in Canada, the United States, Africa and Asia estimated worth $180 million.

"It was my habit to offer to buy any newspaper which came into any discussion," he once wrote.

Besides the 148 newspapers and 138 magazines owned by his organization he had a vast interest in radio, televison and publishing companies.

He put up most of the money to enter commercial television in Scotland in the 1950's, then an unknown field in Britain.

"It was a licence to print money," he said later.

IRANIAN ATHLETES GO BACK TO JEERS

TEHERAN (Reuter) — Iran's Olympic team arrived home to face a public and press outcry over their "miserable" performance at the Games in Montreal.

Only the football team, which lost to the Soviet Union in the quarter-finals, was welcomed with flowers.

From 96 competitors in the nine events, Iran gleaned only a silver medal by welterweight wrestler Mansour Barzegar and a bronze by flyweight weightlifter Mohammed Nassiri.

There had been high hopes for high jumper Teymour Ghiassi, the Asian Games gold medallist with a jump of seven feet three inches. At Montreal, he failed to clear seven feet.

Ghiassi blamed the rain during the event.

Fifth Romanian Athlete Joins Defectors

MONTREAL (UPI) — The immigration department said today a sixth Olympic athlete, another Romanian, has defected and requested permanent residence in Canada.

The latest defector joins four other Romanian athletes and 17-year-old Soviet diver Sergei Nemtsanov who elected not to return home with their national teams following the Olympic summer games which ended Sunday.

An immigration spokesman said the department had also received a request for permanent residence from an Ethiopian national, but he was not an athlete at the games. Ethiopa fielded a 40-member team for the games but dropped out before their start along with other African countries protesting New Zealand's sporting ties with South Africa.

The identity of the fifth Romanian defector was being withheld, the immigration spokesman said, at his request. Of the remaining four Romanian defectors, only oarsman Walter Lambertus and canoeist Ivan Haralambic, have been previously identified.

The most recent defection was announced as controversy continued around Nemtsanov's refusal to return to the U.S.S.R.

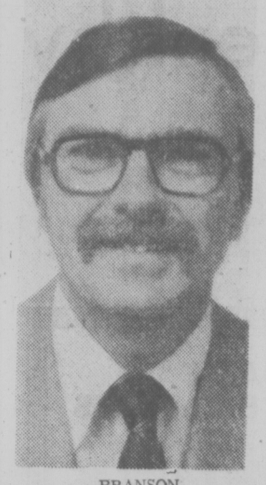
External Affairs Minister Allan MacEachen Tuesday revealed Canada has received two stiff diplomatic notes from the Soviets demanding the return of the 17-year-old diver. He called the Soviet position "quite unacceptable."

But Soviet spokesmen maintained the pressure. The leader of the Soviet Union's track and field team, Nikolai Riashentsev, said at College Park, Maryland Tuesday Nemtsanov's defection represented "the kidnapping of an underage boy sent to Montreal under the province of his coaches.

"This was a well-thought-out, well-placed provocative action," he said.

Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau also rejected Soviet charges Nemtsanov was kidnapped and brainwashed, saying the athlete made the decision "of his own free will."

We'd Like Our Courthouse Back—Branson



BRANSON

Asking if court facilities in Victoria are adequate is a little bit like asking if Victoria is having a good summer.

The answer is no, but then that would be the honest answer in describing any system. Nothing is perfect ad everything can be improved.

But the most persistent complaint — the time it takes to bring an accused person to trial — is being tackled at the provincial court level.

Right now, cases are booked to December at provincial court, and county and supreme courts also have a heavy schedule of trials through the fall.

A committee has been formed by the Victoria Bar Association, under the chairmanship of association president Cecil Branson, to seek solutions to the ever-widening gap between the date of the charge and the trial at provincial court.

"We hope to have some recommendations to put before the deputy attorney-general within two weeks," Branson said in an interview.

"We'd like to reduce the backlog if at all possible," he said, but the best that could be hoped for is 90 days from arraignment to trial.

He said one of the "obvious ways" to cut the time is to have greater communication and co-operation between Crown and defence counsel.

If the Crown could agree to discuss a lot of its case before the preliminary hearing, in particular, and if the defence would agree to make admissions at the preliminary hearing, "it can be shortened considerably."

Another problem being experienced is cases not being completed in the time allotted for them. He gave an example of a recent impaired driving trial in traffic court set for half a day which wasn't finished and now looks like being delayed until mid-December for completion.

One recommendation "which I am reasonably sure will go forward" is to reserve half a day each week for cases which aren't finished within the planned time.

"We are also discussing other ways of co-operating so the provincial court has a better idea of the length of a trial," he said.

One recommendation might be that one sectionn of provincial court become a remand court so that trials can begin on time and not await remands.

As to the superior courts, Branson gives a thin smile and says "they've taken our courthouse away from us. We'd like it back, thanks very much.

One year ago, courts were closed at the Law Courts Building on Burdett while work crews began adding twp new floors to the top. Appeal Court cases which used to be heard in Victoria were removed to Vancouver, and County and Supreme Courts moved to "temporary" accommodation at St. Anne's Academy, the former girls school now used for government offices, on Humboldt Street.

It had been hoped that courts might start returning to the Law Courts Building in October, but now "I can't see any court getting back until early 1977."

Branson describes the cramped, make-shift temporary accommodation at St. Anne's as "organized chaos" with many people, including court staff, lawyers and witnesses, doing their best in a bad situation.

When the superior courts do go back, there will probably be room at the Law Courts Building for two new Provincial Court rooms on the main floor. The law library on the main floor will go to the new fourth floor and the new fifth floor will be offices.

The present courts will remain, he said, except Supreme court chambers on the third floor will be enlarged.

How to Tell Habeus From Corpus

Courts and the legal profession have their own phraseology which often sounds mysterious to the lay person.

Some of the more common words — and their meaning in a general sense — include:

APPELLANT — The party appealing a decision or judgment to a higher court.

APPELLATE COURT — A court having jursidiction of appeal and review, not a "trial court."

ARRAIGNMENT — In criminal practice, the formal reading of a charge to an accused person in open court.

BENCH WARRANT — An order for arrest issued by the court itself.

BURDEN OF PROOF — In the law of evidence, the necessity or duty of affirmatively proving a fact or facts in dispute.

CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE — Evidence of an indirect nature from which the fact is not directly proved but may be inferred.

CODICIL — An addition or supplement to a will.

COMMON LAW — Law which derives its authority solely from use and custom or from judgments and decrees of courts. Sometimes called case law as distinct from statute law.

DECREE — Decision or order of court. Final decree is one which fully and finally disposes of litigation. An interlocutory decree is a provisional or preliminary decree which is not final.

DIRECT EVIDENCE — Proof of facts by witnesses who saw what happened or heard what was said, as opposed to circumstantial evidence, which is indirect.

DIRECT EXAMINATION — The first questioning of a witness. Cross-examination is the questioning of a witness by the party opposed to the one which produced the witness.

DIRECTED VERDICT — An instruction by the judge to the jury to return a specific verdict.

DOUBLE JEOPARDY — Common-law prohibition against more than one prosecution for the same crime, transaction or omission.

EXPERT EVIDENCE — Opinion Testimony given by person qualified to speak authoritatively by reason of special training, skill or familiarity with a subject.

HABEAS CORPUS — Name given to a variety of writs whose object is to bring a person before a court or judge. Most commonly, it directs an official holding a person to produce the person so the court may determine if that person has been denied liberty without proper process of law.

HEARSAY — Evidence which is not from the personal knowledge of the witness.

MANDAMUS —Court order compelling performance of a statutory or public duty.

NEGLIGENCE — The omission to do something which a reasonable person would do, or the doing of something which a reasonable and prudent person would not do.

NEXT FRIEND — An adult representing the interests of an infant or a mentally incompetent person who is the plaintiff in a proceeding in which the adult becomes a party to the action.

PRELIMINARY HEARING — Held to determine whether a person charged with an indictable offence should be committed for trial.

QUASH — To overthrow, vacate, annul or void a conviction, order, summons or indictment.

REASONABLE DOUBT — An accused person is entitled to acquittal if his guilt has not been proved beyond a reasonable doubt — that is, a doubt for which a reason can be ascribed, not speculation or fancy.

RE-EXAMINATION — Questioning of a witness after cross-examination by the lawyer representing the party which first examined the witness.

SUBPOENA — Order for a witness to appear and give testimony.

SUMMONS — Order that a person named in an action that he is required to appear in court and answer the complaint, or for a witness to appear.

VOIR DIRE — A trial within a trial to determine the admissibility of evidence. Juries are excluded from court in this proceeding. If the evidence is ruled admissible by the judge, the jury then hears the matter.

BEFORE THE CELL DOORS CLINK...

To David Richard Nelson, it looked like an empty house.

Needing money and not thinking he would be caught, he broke in. But he was caught.

He was arrested by passing police and later found out what most people also don't know: The Criminal Code of Canada, enacted by Parliament, sets a maximum penalty of life imprisonment.

If Nelson — not a real person — had broken into a warehouse instead of a house, the maximum penalty would be 14 years.

Cecil Branson, president of the Victoria Bar Association, said the only philosophy he can think of behind Parliament's decison to make breaking and entering a dwelling more serious than breaking and entering any other premise is "a man's home is his castle."

He quickly added that he has never heard of someone getting life imprisonment for a B and E at a dwelling.

But using this charge as an example, he traced the outline of what happens to someone arrested and charged with an indictable offence.

The accused person will be fingerprinted and photographed by police and brought before provincial court the next day.

He will either have been able to talk to Legal Aid duty counsel in police cells, or been able to get in touch with his own lawyer, before court, or at court to talk to Legal Aid duty counsel.

The charge, or information, is read to him and in Victoria the practice is for him to be asked to elect trial method: Trial by judge and jury, trial by judge alone or trial by magistrate.

It is "very unusual" at this stage for someone to elect trial method unless he wants to plead guilty, in which case he elects trial by magistrate.

Sentence in that case can be dealt with immediately or, more likely, he is remanded to a future date so background material (prepared by a probation officer in a presentence report for the magistrate) can be put together.

He could be released or held in custody depending on a number of circumstances, the most important of which would be criminal record, if any, home background and circumstances of the offence.

B and E Can Result In Life Term

If the accused doesn't plead guilty, he usually asks for a remand which is invariably granted. That is usually for seven or eight days and the Provincial Court judge asks if the Crown has objection to his release.

If the offence is a drug charge, or the accused is on bail for another offence, he must show cause why he should be released. Otherwise, the Crown must show cause why he should not be released.

He can be released on his own undertaking to appear again, that there be some form of surety — one or more people giving a written guarantee that if the accused doesn't live up to terms of release, they will forfeit the surety money; or cash surety may be filed with the court; or of course, a tention order may be made and he won't be released.

If a detention order is made, this can be reviewed before either a County or Supreme Court judge.

Returning to court, the accused will again be asked to choose trial method and can ask for a further remand. If he elects for his trial method, with the present crowded court calendar, it will probably be mid-December before a trial at Provincial Court can be held, or a preliminary hearing at Provincial Court can be held prior to higher court trial later, unless a preliminary hearing is waived by the accused.

Branson said if the accused is being held in custody "strong efforts" are made to bump an already-scheduled case to deal with it as expeditiously as possible.

At both the preliminary hearing and at bail reviews, the accused can (and invariably does) ask for a non-publication order which is granted, which imposes a virtual blackout of news until trial.

The accused will have a lawyer, either his own or one provided by Legal Aid. In very rare instances, the accused will represent himself.

There is "no fixed guideline" in determining qualification for a Legal Aid lawyer, said Branson. It is a subjective evaluation of a person's ability to pay.

Legal Aid is financed under a federal-provincial agreement and, recently, a substantial contribution from the provincial Law Foundation.

Recent belt-tightening in provision of Legal Aid has resulted in the virtual exclusion of all summary conviction matters where it is a first offence.

At the preliminary hearing, the Crown must establish a prima facie case — "in other words, that the accused is probably guilty." At this stage, reasonable doubt does not go to the accused but to the Crown. The accused has the right to call evidence but rarely does.

The provincial court judge will either commit the accused for trial at a higher court, or if not that could be the end of it.

But a discharge is not an acquittal, Branson pointed out.

The Crown could still lay a direct indictment in a higher court or the Crown could go before a county or supreme court judge and ask that an indictment be laid at a higher court level. This rarely happens, however.

If the accused is committed for trial, which happens in 90 per cent of cases, it will probably be two to four months before he appears for trial, either before a judge alone at County Court, or before a judge and jury at the General Sessions of county court or before an Assize of the supreme court. Most cases go to County Court.

At the higher court, a pleading is taken and generally a not guilty plea is entered although it isn't unusual for a guilty plea to be made.

The Crown presents its evidence, followed by the defence if it chooses to present evidence, followed — very rarely — by the Crown again.

If it is a jury trial, a panel of 50 or 60 men and women will have been picked by the local sheriff from the provincial voters list and that panel will be present for the list of trials set down for each General Session of county court and each Assize of supreme court.

Unlike the United States, there is very little checking by counsel of the potential jurors. The list presented to the lawyers contains the name, address and occupation of each jury panel member.

All the names, each on a separate piece of paper, are placed in a box and are drawn in groups, at random, by the Court clerk.

The Crown can stand aside an unlimited number of potential jurors but if the Crown says it is "content" then it is up to defence counsel to agree or disagree.

In the case of breaking and entering a dwelling, the defence can challenge without cause 12 potential jurors. In other cases it is less, depending on the maximum penalty for the offence.

The defence can challenge with cause an unlimited number of potential jurors but this rarely happens. When it does, two persons already picked as jurors are called on to decide the issue.

The most obvious reason for challenging a person for cause, said Branson, is bias — that the panel member is a friend of the accused or a witness or is familiar with the case itself.

Fingerprints Just One Step In Long Road

When the 12 jury members have been chosen, they are sworn in. When the trial begins, the judge will outline the respective functions of the judge and the jury in the trial — the judge alone decides points of law, the jury decides points of fact.

The trial itself is often interrupted by a voir dire, or trial within a trial, is held to determine whether a piece of evidence (often a statement by the accused to police) is admissible. This is decided by the judge in the absence of the jury but if it is ruled admissible, it is then presented to the jury.

At the conclusion of the Crown's case, the defence can make a motion that there isn't a prima facie case — that there is not sufficient evidence on which a properly-instructed jury could make a conviction.

If the judge agrees, that ends the case, subject to appeals. If not, the defence can call evidence but it is not required to and can just say the crown has not established guilt beyond a reasonable doubt.

Both counsel will then address the jury and the judge will deliver his charge which includes the general law, summary of evidence and precis of the Crown and defence positions.

The case then goes to the jury which makes its decision in a private room.

If the accused is acquitted, that ends the matter, subject to an appeal by the Crown. If he is convicted, he may be sentenced then or remanded, in or out of custody, for a presentence report. This usually takes three weeks to prepare and then sentence is imposed.

If he is acquitted, the Crown may appeal to the B.C. court of appeal on a point of law alone. There is a further right of appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada, with leave first from that court.

If he is convicted, the accused can appeal on a point of law, on mixed fact and law, and on fact.

Application for bail can be made to the B.C. Court of Appeal. He can appeal the sentence or the conviction or both.

But, said Branson, the court of appeal has the right to increase a sentence as well as reduce it although it is quite rare that sentences are increased.

As to the judges who preside at the various stages, provincial court judges are appointed in British Columbia, by the cabinet upon recommendation from the Judicial Council.

The age limit is 65 and all judges must now be lawyers, although this was not always the case and there remain three non-lawyer judges, including Judge William Ostler of the Victoria Provincial court.

Judges in all other courts — county, supreme, B.C. Court of Appeal and Supreme Court of Canada — are appointed by the Attorney-General of Canada. The age limit is 75.

More Frequent Buses

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

A greater frequency of buses and minimal "layover" time in the downtown area will be among the transit service improvements when an extensive rescheduling of routes becomes effective in the Victoria area Sept. 3, a B.C. Hydro official told city aldermen Tuesday.

Operations superintendent George Seright said one of the main advantages for travellers on the several routes affected will be a stepped-up frequency of service to a 15-minute interval between buses, instead of the present 20-minute pattern — or four buses per hour instead of three.

Running time will be reduced to eliminate waiting time at the downtown termini, and drivers will have their "recovery time" at the outer suburban termini, Seright told the city's traffic committee.

In addition, he said, peak-hour crowding should be eased because Hydro plans to use its new 40-foot buses on routes that can accommodate them. These can carry 49 to 53 passengers, compared with the 24-passenger capacity of the standard 35-foot buses.

Most of the changes involve connections between routes in the city centre.

One major change will see the Haultain bus travel through the city to Fort, then east to Fernwood, crossing Pandora before continuing on the regular Haultain route. Inbound, it will cover the same route to Yates and through the city to Gorge.

Seright noted that Haultain passengers will no longer be able to travel direct to the legislative buildings, but will have to transfer at the Douglas-Yates terminus.

No service through the Mayfair shopping centre would be available after 6 p.m.

Teens' Pop Stand Stays

A group of Sidney teens will be able to operate their pop stand for the duration of the summer after Sidney council waived a special bylaw Tuesday.

The concession stand operated by Sidney Teens Action Group (STAG) was ordered dismantled Friday by clerk Geoffrey Logan, but council reversed that decision at a special meeting Tuesday.

Acting mayor Richard Leigh said today the stand was not causing a traffic problem and the organizers had already gotten clearance from the health board.

So council waived the bylaw prohibiting business on a public right of way and ordered STAG to get a business licence. The stand can continue until September 15, on the condition the site remains clean and litter-free, said Leigh.

Set up beside Ocean Avenue and the Washington State Ferries terminal, the catering service was started by the group to raise funds to sponsor teen activities.

The STAG members had already bought coffee, soft drinks, doughnuts and chocolate bars to serve ferry passengers in lineups.

MALL CAFE SOON?

The first sidewalk restaurant on the Government Street Mall may be in operaion later this month, if Victoria city council approves a recommendation from its roads and underground services committee.

But Sam's Deli, located in the Belmont Building at 805 Government, will be able to offer its customers outdoor dining for little more than a month.

In approving the restaurant's application to install a platform on the sidewalk to accommodate chairs and tables, the committee stipulated Tuesday that the structure can remain there only from May 1 to Sept. 30.

Bruce Housser, the new owner of the establishment, had explained that the platform was essential to compensate for the slope of the street at that point. The platform would be two feet above grade at the south end.

Committee chairman Ald. John Hayes said he was in favor of approving the application on a 12-month trial basis, but Ald. Alf Hood said that would be foolish and unnecessary.

"No one is going to sit there in the pouring rain," he said, and the dias would be an unused and annoying intrusion on the sidewalk for eight months of the year.

After initial opposition to the concept of outdoor eating establishments on the mall, council recently approved the idea in principle and laid down guidelines for their operation.

Recreation Vote Set

Central Saanich residents will vote Sept. 25 on a proposed $750,000 recreational centre that would be built in Centennial Park.

Date for the referendum, which if passed will add about three mills to individual tax bills, was set Tuesday by municipal council.

Council decided to hold the vote in September rather than in conjunction with the November municipal elections to allow for an early construction start if approval is given the project.

Route Seems Doomed

A B.C Hydro transit plan to extend its Mount Tolmie No. 4 bus route appears doomed after neighborhood complaints and municipal planning opposition before Saanich council Tuesday.

Aldermen decided not to endorse the proposal, which would have seen the No. 4 bus re-routed from its old terminal at St. Aidan's Church to travel along Palo Alto, Mortimer, Ansell and Midgard.

In reviewing the plan, the municipal planning department noted that the idea was to relieve overcrowding on the Shelbourne fast bus by stimulating use of the Mount Tolmie service.

But it also said the roads involved in the proposed extention are narrow and not built to handle heavy traffic and it recommended council not endorse the plan.

Aldermen were told that neighbors opposed the extention because they feared vibrations could damage their houses or compound flooding problems in the area. Buses would produce a traffic safety problem on the narrow streets as well.

Whether council's lack of endorsement is enough to kill the plan remains to be seen. One neighbor told council that a B.C. Hydro official told him no extention would be approved without agreement from Saanich while a Saanich official told him the decision was one to be made by B.C. Hydro.

Rezonings Get Mixed Reactions

Rezoning applications to allow building a small apartment on Inverness west of Quadra and to expand the parking lot at the Royal Oak shopping plaza cleared one hurdle Tuesday.

At the same time as Saanich council voted to hold public hearings on them, it turned down applications which would have led to a condominium duplex at Quadra and Nicholson and a garden centre at Royal Oak.

In the case of the proposed rezoning at Quadra and Nicholson, in an application from C. E. Warren and D. M. Mackillop, aldermen overrode a favorable recommendations from their planning department.

A department report noted that while siting of the duplex did not meet the recommended 10-foot sideyard requirement, it did meet requirements of the zoning bylaw.

The Inverness rezoning would see a 13-unit apartment built on the .34-acre property, which is owned by B. E. Butler Construction. At the Royal Oak shopping centre, .8 acres alongside Viewmont would be added to the centre's parking lot.

A rezoning application from R. A. Pederson on the other side of the Viewmont did not fair so well. Council agreed with the recommendations of its advisory planning commission and planner and rejected it, noting past policy has been to restrict commercial development to the east side of Viewmont.

Pederson wanted to locate a garden centre and florist shop on the property.

Party Caution Given Jaycees

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Repeated complaints from neighbors about rowdy parties at the Jaycee Hall produced a lot of tough talk from Saanich council Tuesday, including a threat to block liquor permits there.

But in the end, aldermen decided to give the Junior Cnamber of Commerce until the end of September to bring under control functions in the hall at Quadra and Lodge.

The Jaycees lease the hall for some occasions but a neighbor said Tuesday most of the latest noisy parties were Jayceee affairs.

Jack Fry, of 1083 Lodge, told council of the "yelling, swearing and gunning of engines" which goes on as parties break up as late as 3 a.m.

"They've named themselves right — they're still juniors who haven't grown up," he said of the Jaycees.

Similar complaints to council in May led aldermen to institute a probationary period for hall activities. A police department report said there have been eight occasions in the past 10 weeks when officers have been called to the hall.

Neighbors also complain of headlights beamed into their bedroom windows as partygoers head home and of the hall's property being used for storing rolls of wire. A promised fence has never been built, they said.

Among suggestions from aldermen: council instruct the police department to withhold the required signature for liquor permits, or permits require parties to end at midnight.

Council finally decided on another two months of watching, with police to keep an eye on activities and the municipal administration to check on whether the property owners have met all rezoning conditions, such as building a screening fence.

Meanwhile, Jaycee president Steve Shea said today his organization is baffled about the "so-called incidents."

Apart from a Nieghborhood Watch meeting, which is run by Saanich police, Weight Watchers' meetings and gatherings of a dog obedience club, the hall hasn't been rented since June 26, he said.

The complaints seem to centre around one neighbor and there doesn't appear to be anything the Jaycees can do to make him happy, Shea said.

The president did say there was one incident four months ago in which a large rowdy crowd spilled out onto the streets and he conceded it was "really bad."

But since then, the Jaycees hav been highly selective in their rental policy. The hall is rented not to make a profit but to try and defray expenses, he said.

McKENZIE SAYS HE'S SORRY

Victoria Ald. Ron McKenzie has apologized for statements in a Victoria Times article concerning Ald. Bob Wright's role in a Wharf Street development proposal and his alleged links with developer Hans Hartwig.

The written apology from McKenzie reads:

"I, Alderman Ronald McKenzie, wish to make it clear that at no time did I intend any reflection on the character or reputation of Alderman Wright, nor did I intend any imputations or allegations against him. If such an impression was created I unresevedly withdraw them and apologize. I accept that Alderman Wright was not influenced in any way by improper motives and all allegations to the contrary are without foundation. I accept that there was not and is not any improper connection between Alderman Wright and the developer, Mr. Hartwig."

Keep 'Freeze' Council Told

The development freeze now covering much of Victoria's Inner Harbor must not be lifted until a comprehensive plan for the area has been prepared and received full public support, says a concerned resident in a letter to Victoria city council.

Eberhard Schulenburg, 121 Government Street, who has spoken out at many public hearings on waterfront development proposals, says the Inner Harbor is a "unique area of potential urban beauty," and is not "a pork barrel to be bargained away piecemeal."

His letter, which was given the perfunctory "received-and-filed" treatment by council's central area development committee on Tuesday, is an obvious reference to the recent controversy surrounding an apartment development proposal on Wharf Street.

City council last week asked the provincial government to lift the development freeze and heritage designation on the property, once a satisfactory land-use contract has been worked out with the developer.

Most council members regard the request as a preliminary move involving no commitments, but two have called it premature and dangerous, pointing out that the city could be losing its bargaining powers.

Schulenburg states: "I do wish our bickering Victoria aldermen would remember that the development freeze and public ownership of the Inner Harbor waterfront were established for the purpose of providing time and talent for the creation of an over-all Inner Harbor Plan."

Among other benefits, such a plan would provide full access to the waterfront for all citizens; "enhance and emphasize the dignity and importance" of the legislative buildings; and prevent "foolish, vulgar and garish" development.

But where is that plan?

Schulenburg adds: "I trust that the Capital District Improvement Commission, the Victoria City planners, if there are any, and city council will not try to pass off horse trading as planning, i.e. 'until the city gets what it wants,' to quote our mayor.

"What would it be that the city wants?"

There was no committee discussion on the letter.

Q. What is Gene Wilder's mailing address! — J. F.

A. Write to Gene Wilder, 61 East 80th St., New York City, N.Y., 10021.

A. Could you tell me the nationality of Joe Morris, president of the Canadian Labor Congress: where he was born and is Morris his original name? M. McI.

A. As far as we know Morris is the only name the CLC president has ever had. He is Lancashire-born and came to Canada as a youth to work in the B.C. forests in the early 30s. Active in the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' Union and in 1936 with the just-formed International Woodworkers of America, Morris was employed by Comox Logging and Railway Co. at Ladysmith (now Crown Zellerbach), eventually became president of Duncan Local 1-80 IWA, a union field representative, regional president and then regional vice-president of the labor congress, to which he was elected president in 1974. He is 63.

Q. In the U.S. which is the Hawkeye State? P.T.

A. Iowa, also known as the Corn State. The Hawkeye nickname is believed to honor Black Hawk, a famous Indian chief.

Q. Can you tell me when the Iron Age started? M.M.

A. It's the period of history that began about 1100 B.C. with widespread use of iron for tools and weapons.

Q. Where and when will the next world exhibition (Expo) be held? P. A. H.

A. A category I world exhibition has been tentatively set for Los Angeles in 1981. Special category exhibitions have also been tentatively set for Australia in 1987 and Hungary in 1978, the latter being arranged around a horticultural theme. An application has also been made to have a special category world exhibition in 1982 at Knoxville, Tenn.

Trident a Target to Help Us Remember

God of our fathers, known of old,
Lord of our far-flung battle-line,
Beneath whose awful Hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine—
Lord God of hosts, be with us yet,
Lest we forget — lest we forget!

Rudyard Kipling wrote those lines back in 1897.

We hear them, now and then, as we honor the dead of the wars of the world. But we forget.

Between the yearly dawn services, we never remember the horrors, the killing, the bodies on the battlefield.

You didn't know that this Friday is Hiroshima Day or that next Monday is Nagasaki Day, did you? No, and neither did I — until someone who hasn't forgotten told me.

On Aug. 6, 1945, a U.S. Army plane dropped a single atomic bomb on the centre of the Japanese city of Hiroshima. The bomb destroyed 4.7 square miles of the city. An estimated 70,000 people were killed or missing and another 70,000 were injured by the blast.

Three days later, on Aug. 9, 1945, another atomic bomb was dropped on the city of Nagasaki. Japan surrendered to the Allies on Aug. 14, 1945.

That second bomb devastated 1.8 square miles of Nagasaki, killing 40,000 at least, and wounding another 40,000.

Thousands more died later from the effects of radiation in both areas.

Although the world has trembled since at the thought of another nuclear bomb being dropped, still the arms buildup has continued.

Now, 31 years after Hiroshima, concerned people — many of them Canadians and some of them from Victoria — are refusing to forget and are trying to ensure that it never happens again.

These people are members of Pacific Life Community and their target is the Trident nuclear submarine base being built in Bangor, Wash., only about 60 air miles from Victoria. They want construction at the base halted and believe they can achieve it with "an intensive, widening non-violent campaign."

On Sunday, PLC members and anyone else who wants to tag along will march their Trident monster — a 550-foot-long conglomeration of bamboo poles and plastic with black strips (representing the 408 warheads each 550-foot submarine will carry) blowing in the wind — over the U.S. border to Blaine.

Says Vancouver PLC spokesperson Jim Douglass:

"We shall march the Trident Monster across the border in dedication to the purpose: No more Hiroshimas! No more Nagasakis! Stop Trident now!"

"The U.S. Government plans to begin sending the Trident submarine, the world's most destructive weapons system, across the Canadian border in April, 1978, on Trident's way to the Pacific Ocean," Douglass points out. "Trident will cross without the U.S. having sought prior permission of the Canadian people or government, just as it has sought no Canadian permission for the building of Trident's base less than 50 miles south of the border."

Once across the border, the Canadians will be joined Sunday by American PLC members and the "Monster" will then be transported to Bangor for a demonstration in front of the Trident base gates.

There will be other "actions" on Friday (to mark Hiroshima Day) and on Monday (Nagasaki Day) by Victoria, Vancouver and American members of the PLC. The PLC people are keeping quiet about these actions. They want them to be a surprise.

You can't help feeling they are beating their heads against the iron railings of the Trident base fence in vain, though. It's a matter of economics, the mighty power of money. It's David and Goliath in the extreme.

The Pacific Life Community doesn't even have enough money to be able to send a member over to Japan later this month for the world conference against atomic and hydrogen bombs, as it would like to do.

The U.S. Government is pouring billions of dollars into the Trident base to ensure a superior system to the Russians.

Although they are already far ahead of everyone, the Americans certainly have no intention of slowing down the arms race. They are, in fact, speeding it up.

Only last week in the Times, a story from San Diego told of the Americans' boast of a super robot plane that can carry a nuclear bomb and never misses its target. Now that's comforting.

The plane, which is actually called a cruise missile and has no human pilot, is still in the test stage. But already America's second-ranking defence executive, Williams P. Clements Jr., has been quoted in the Washington Post as saying that billions of dollars will be spent on the cruise missle if it continues to fulfil its technical promise.

"Our technology is, at least in my judgment, 10 years ahead of the Russians," said Clements, "and I would look for the gap in our favor to continue over time."

Another comforting thought. And the operative word there is "continue." There is not the slightest intention of even a lull, let alone a halt, in this insane race. Trident nuclear submarines; cruise missiles that never miss; and billions of dollars. And sure as hell the Americans aren't going to let a handful of poverty-stricken idealists put them off that path.

Yet still they try, as indeed one must if one is to have an ideal.

The PLC people know that whatever they try at the base could lead to prison. This week, three PLC members are being tried in Seattle federal court after a fence-cutting incident at the base in May.

But, whether it's cutting the fence, breaking onto the base and planting a peace garden, or chaining themselves to the main gate, the PLC people believe it's the right thing to do to bring it before the public.

And it's all symbolic.

A Victoria PLC member put it simply:

CRUD KEEPS FALLING ON HIS HEAD

SEATTLE (AP) — Orm Hamilton, 67, is tired of fish slop falling on his old bald head. After 12 years of enduring such indignity, he has written a poem about it.

"All tourists to the Pike Pace Market beware.

"Smelly old fish slop could drip in your hair

"Or splash all over your face or your duds—

"This stinky cascade of foul smelling crud . . ."

The retired landscape planner says the problem started 12 years ago when a drainpipe leading from one of the seafood shops in the market was damaged in an earthquake, "and it's been dripping and splashing cold, fishy water on me and on other people ever since.

"I've seen it hit beautiful ladies right on top of their heads and fancy hats," he continued. "It was hit three times in the last month, and with a head like this, you feel every miserable drop."

Hamilton says he gets his daily exercise walking up and down stairs which pass under the leaky drainpipe on the southern end of the market. He complained that his pleas to the market management have fallen on deaf ears.

"I write them letters. I go up there. I get the same story every time — the market's going to be renovated pretty soon, they say, so why spend a lot of money to repair the problem now?" he said.

Hamilton thinks the market should install a relatively cheap metal trough to catch the droppings.

Prisoner Wouldn't Pay Toll

BOSTON (UPI) — Never having been in a similar situation before, Chelsea patrolman Robert Hall was a little confused.

Hall was transporting a woman prisoner to the Massachusetts correctional institution at Framingham Monday when he ran into a little trouble — not with the prisoner, but with an adamant toll collector.

The patrolman pulled up to the Allston toll booth of the Massachusetts turnpike in his partol wagon, but discovered he didn't have the 30 cent toll — and that the collector was markedly unsympathetic.

He was told only firetrucks and ambulances on emergency runs could get on the road free and he would have to come up with the 30 cents or find another route.

"I didn't know what to do — so I asked the woman if she had 30 cents," said Hall. "She said she wouldn't give it to me."

"I showed him the court papers and everything. He said 'This is a private road.' He was going to have me arrested," said the policeman.

Finally he was forced to take a longer alternate road.

"It's crazy," he said.

LONDON — May Parsons has been ordered to leave her pet boa constrictor, Basil, at home when she goes to work at a gas station.

Miss Parsons, 24, said she did not like leaving the four-foot snake at home in his glass tank because she thought he would be lonely. So she took him to work and kept him on her lap while she worked as a cashier at the station. Now the boss says Basil has to go.

BELLEVUE, Wash. — The "Sisko Kid" is being told to take his ice cream cart and ride on out of town. But even if he's been shot down once, the 18-year-old entrepreneur isn't giving up his fight.

"I can't believe it," said John Sisko, Jr., who played music from his cart to attract youthful buyers. But in Bellevue, peace and quiet reign supreme. Amplified music in the great outdoors is against the law.

Police told Sisko he could ring his bell, but not play his song. Business fell in half, Sisko told the city council, costing him $500 a week.

NARRAGANSETT, R.I. — Louie, a French student from Paris, flew home Tuesday after a four-week incognito vacation.

He toured Washington, spent five days at the Democratic National Convention as an observer and worked two weeks at a Providence bank.

Few people introduced to the handsome 18-year-old knew he was the son of French President Valery Giscard D'Estaing.

"I would have been considered a representative of the president and that was not at all what I wanted to do," he said Monday.

'WORKORSE' $1 EYED FOR U.S.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The treasury department thinks Americans would like a $1 coin that's bigger than a quarter but smaller than a 50-cent piece.

"People carry a lot of quarters in their pockets," said U.S. Mint spokesman James Parker Tuesday. "We think they might be inclined to carry a similar $1 coin if it was available. It, like the quarter, could become another workhorse coin."

A final decision is expected next month.

The idea came from the Research Triangle Institute, a North Carolina think tank, Parker said it found the present Eisenhower silver dollar "too heavy, too cumbersome."

Will the new $1 coin go the way of other novel but relatively unsuccessful ideas like $2 bills?

The deuce, discontinued more than 10 years ago because of "superstition," was resurrected on Thomas Jefferson's birthday this spring. But apparently Americans still don't like it.

"I think the $1 coin, if adopted, will be different," Parker said. "People will certainly have no excuse not to use it."

KING HUSSEIN SEES CRASH

SEATTLE (AP) — David A. Rahm of Bellingham, known as "The Flying Professor," was killed Tuesday when his biplane crashed in Amman, Jordan, while performing for King Hussein.

Rahm, 45, was a geology teacher at Western Washington State College. He was in Jordan as a guest of the king and was teaching at the University of Jordan.

Prisoners Moved

BERLIN (UPI)—West Berlin authorities Tuesday transferred three convicted women anarchists serving prison terms in West Berlin to jails in West Germany, the justice department said. A justice department spokesman said Baader - Meinhof terrorists Brigitte Asdonk, 28, Annerose Reiche, 29, and Vera Berzel, 23, were flown to Hamburg aboard a charter plane, from where they were carried to prisons in Luebeck and Frankfurt.

Shawnigan Concerts Continue

The international concert series being sponsored during August by Shawnigan Summer School of Arts, continues this week with two on-campus events at St. Michael's University School, Richmond, and a special on Sunday at McPherson Playhouse.

Thursday's event at the school will feature Gro Anderson on flute with William Aide assisting on piano; Roland Richard, baritone, accompanied by pianist Denise Masse, and the Stuttgart Piano Trio.

On Saturday the Orford String Quartet will be heard and pianist Robin McCabe, violinist Ruggiero Ricci and cellist Harvey Shapiro, the three latter being American artists.
